THE DRUNKARD;

---OR,---

The Fallen Saved.

A MORAL DOMESTIC DRAMA.

IN FIVE ACTS.

ADAPTED BY W. H. SMITH,

AS ORIGINALLY PERFORMED AT THE MUSEUM,
BOSTON, IN 1844.

---TO WHICH IS ADDED---

A DESCRIPTION OF THE COSTUMES—CAST OF THE CHARACTERS—ENTRANCES AND EXITS—RELATIVE POSITIONS OF THE PERFORMERS ON THE STAGE, AND THE WHOLE OF THE STAGE BUSINESS.

---O---

---CLYDE, OHIO:---

AMES' PUBLISHING CO.
THE DRUNKARD.

CAST OF CHARACTERS.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Museum, Boston, 1844</th>
<th>American Museum, N. Y., 1856</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>EDWARD MIDDLETON</td>
<td>Mr. W. H. Smith</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LAWYER CRIBBS</td>
<td>Mr. G. H. Wyatt</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WILLIAM DOWTON</td>
<td>Mr. C. W. Hunt</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>FARMER GATES</td>
<td>Mr. C. H. Saunders</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>FARMER STEVENS</td>
<td>Mr. G. Howard</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>OLD JOHNSON</td>
<td>Mr. G. E. Locke</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SAM</td>
<td>Mr. S. Adams</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>FIRST LOAFER</td>
<td>Mr. J. Adams</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SECOND LOAFER</td>
<td>Mr. Thompson</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MR. RENCELAW</td>
<td>Mr. G. C. Germon</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LANDLORD</td>
<td>Mr. Harris</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>BAR-KEEPER</td>
<td>Mr. Willard</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WATCHMAN</td>
<td>Mr. Coard</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MARY WILSON</td>
<td>Mrs. G. C. Germon</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>AGNES DOWTON, a maniac</td>
<td>Mrs. Thoman</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MRS. WILSON</td>
<td>Mrs. Woodward</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PATIENCE</td>
<td>Mrs. C. W. Hunt</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>JULIA</td>
<td>Miss A. Philips</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Villagers, loafers, watchman, etc.

TIME OF REPRESENTATION—3 HOURS.

SCENERY.

ACT I.—Scene 1—Interior of a pretty rural cottage, flowers, painting, etc.; table with Bible; arm-chair, r.; table, with embroidery chair, and frame, L. Scene 2—Front, and cut woods, in c. Scene 3—Interior of Miss Spindle’s dwelling house; toilette table, looking glasses, essence bottles, all showy and gaudy. Scene 4—Landscape view. Scene 5—a village back-ground; exterior of a beautiful cottage, L.; vines, entwined roses, etc.; the extreme of rural tranquil beauty; rustic table, with fruit, cake, etc., L.; rustic chairs and benches.

ACT II.—Scene 1—A chamber in Miss Spindle’s house. Scene 2—a landscape. Scene 3—a country bar-room, bar, L.; old-fashioned gun hung up; cow notices, etc., table, r.; chairs and stools around room; decanters on bar. Scene 4—Landscape view. Scene 5—Interior of cottage, as in Act I; furniture very plain; lack of comfort and order; table and two chairs, r. c.; set door, r. 2 e.; everything in disorder.

ACT III.—Scene 1—Broadway. Scene 2—a street. Scene 3—Interior of the Arbor, on Broadway; bar, with decanters, etc., r.; table, with backgammon board at the back, c.; chairs around. Scene 4—Exterior of a bar-room on the Five Points. Scene 5—a wretched garret; old table and chair, with lamp burning dimly; straw bed on floor, r. Scene 6—The Five Points, stage dark.

ACT IV.—Scene 1—a wretched outhouse or shed, supposed to be near a tavern; early morning. Scene 2—Union Square. Scene 3—Broadway, with a view of Bar num’s Museum. Scene 4—Room in Rencelaw’s house.

ACT V.—Village entrance, as in Act 1.; cottage, l. u. r. Scene 2—Front and cut wood. Scene 3—Interior of cottage, as in Act 1., Scene 1.
THE DRUNKARD.

PROPERTIES.

Bible, embroidery frame, and embroidery; wild flowers, grasses and weeds, for Agnes; fruit and cake for bridal party; flowers; baskets of bells to ring off stage; bottles, glasses, and pitchers for bar-room; whip for Stevens; bottle for hollow of tree; check for Cribbs; money for ditto; poor lamp, to burn dimly; shop-work for Mary; half a loaf of bread; old, tattered shawl for Mary; very shabby hat; phial full of fluid; ball and hoops for children; wallet and check; books for room in Rencelaw's house; will; pistol. (See last scene for full description of articles needed to form tableaux.)

SYNOPSIS.

Edward Middleton, a young, genorous, accomplished man, is left wealthy by the death of his father. One Lawyer Cribbs, who has much to do with the Middleton estate, has been left a sort of guardian to young Middleton. Cribbs—in his anxiety to have Mrs. Wilson turned out of her cottage, in order that he may reduce her and her daughter to poverty, and thus forward his designs upon the beautiful girl—leads to her meeting Middleton. The youth is overheard by the girl, uttering the noblest sentiments, and is thus prepossessed in his favor; while he no sooner sees her than he is smitten by her rare beauty—his admiration is further increased when he converses with her, and finds that her person, loveliness is eclipsed by the purity of her principles, and the extent of her information. He soon makes a declaration—is accepted—and the sun soon shines upon what appears the most auspicious of nuptials. But Edward Middleton's very frankness—his open heart and generous disposition—only renders him an easy victim to the wiles of Lawyer Cribbs, who sets about with devilish ingenuity to lead him into dissipation—until he lowers himself step by step to the very lowest depth of drunkenness. His family is broken up, and he himself becomes a wretched loafer about the filthiest dens of Five Points. Here Cribbs follows him, but fails in his artful attempts to get him to commit a felony. In the same dark neighborhood Mrs. Middleton strives to make a livelihood for herself and little daughter—and barely succeeds in escaping starvation. Here a noble temperance apostle, Mr. Rencelaw, comes to the aid of the fallen Middleton, and his devoted family, and by dint of wise precepts and solemn adjurations he rouses all that is noble and manly in Middleton's heart, and the still young man rises to his native dignity of character, breaking loose from the trammels that had bound and degraded him. But not alone on Middleton had Lawyer Cribbs tried his hellish arts. By an act of violence he had overthrown the sanity of Agnes Downton, a beautiful village girl, who now and then appears, singing snatches of songs, and strewn the road with wild flowers. Agnes has a brother, William, the foster-brother of Middleton, and his good genius throughout the play. Flitting in and out, like a bird of ill-omen, is a conceited spinster, Patience, who is sharp-set for a breach of marriage suit against any specimen of the male gender. She occasions much fun—relieving the sombre shades of the very affecting drama. At last Lawyer Cribbs is detected, and his whole career of villainy exposed. Agnes regains her senses, and Edward Middleton, and his wife and child, entertain their numerous friends in their "Paradise Regained"—a happy cottage home.
The Drunkard.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Interior of a pretty rural cottage—MRS. WILSON discovered in arm-chair, R.—MARY seated by table, L.

Mrs. W. It was in that corner, Mary, where your poor father breathed his last—this chair is indeed dear to me for it was in this he sat the very day before he died. Oh, how he loved this calm retreat, and often in his last illness he rejoiced that the companion of his youth would close his eyes in these rural shades, and be laid in that little nook beside him; but now—

Mary. Dear mother. It is true, this sweet cottage is most dear to us. But we are not the proprietors. Old Mr. Middleton never troubled us much. But as our late worthy landlord is no more, it is generally believed that our dear cottage will be sold. We cannot censure his son for that.

Mrs. W. No; the young must be provided for, and willingly I bow with resignation to that great power that loveth while it chasteneth; but when I think that you, my beloved child, will be left exposed to the thousand temptations of life, a penniless orphan. (a knock, c. d.) Hark who knocks? Dry your tears, my darling. Come in.

Enter, Lawyer Cribbs, c. d.—comes down c.

—Good morning, sir. Mary, my child, a chair.

Crib. (sitting l. c.) Good morning, Mrs. Wilson: good morning, my dear young lady. A sad calamity has befallen the neighborhood, my good Mrs. Wilson.

Mrs. W. Many a poor person, I fear, will have reason to think so, sir.

Crib. Yes, yes. You are right. Ah! he was a good man, that Mr. Middleton. I knew him well. He placed great confidence in my advice.

Mary. Was he not very rich once, Mr. Cribbs?

Crib. Yes, yes; when the times were good, but bad speculations, unlucky investments, false friends—alas! alas! we have all our ups and downs, my dear madam!

Mrs. W. Ah! Mr. Cribbs, I perceive you are a man, who—

Crib. Has a heart to feel for the unfortunate. True, madam, it is the character I have attained, though I am not the man to boast. Have you any prospect of—that is—have you provided—

Mary. It is true, then, too true, the cottage and garden will be sold?
Crib. Why, what can the young man do, my dear? A gay young man like him. Fond of the world, given somewhat to excess, no doubt. But pardon me, my dear Miss Mary; I would not call up a blush on the cheek of modesty. But you know, the extravagance, that is, the folly—

Mrs. W. All, sir. I understand you—very much unlike his father, I would say.

Crib. I place great confidence in your prudence, Mrs. Wilson. I wish the young man well, with all my heart. Heaven knows, I have cause to do so, for his honored father's sake.

Mrs. W. Come, come, Mr. Cribbs, he is better off. It is impiety to mourn a good man's death. His end was that of a Christian.

Crib. Judge, then, of the interest which I take in the last remaining scion of that honored stock. But madam, Edward Middleton. He is yet young, and—

Mrs. W. I think he is not more than twenty. I recollect him when a lad, a bright, blue-eyed boy, with flaxen hair, tall of his age.

Crib. Twenty-three last July, madam; that is his age, precisely—he is giddy, wild, and reckless. As the good man says, "When I was a child, I thought as a child." (a pause—CRIBBS looks round the room) Well, madam, business is business. I am a plain man, Mrs. Wilson, and sometimes called too blunt—and—and—

Mary. You mean to say that we must leave the cottage, sir.

Crib. Bear up, my dear madam, bear up. If I may be so officious, I would try Boston—at the Intelligence Offices there, any healthy young woman, like your daughter, can obtain a profitable situation—think of it, think of it, my good madam. I will see you again soon, and now, heaven bless you. (exit, c. d., and off l.

Mrs. Wilson and Mary look for a moment at each other, and then embrace.

Mrs. W. Well, comfort, my daughter, comfort. It is a good thing to have a friend in the hour of trouble. This Mr. Cribbs appears to be a very feeling man; but before taking his adv'ce, we would do well to make our proposed trial of this young man, Edward Middleton. You have the money in your purse?

Mary. It is all here, mother. Thirty dollars—the sum we have saved to purchase fuel for the winter.

Mrs. W. That will partially pay the rent score. When this young man finds we are disposed to deal fairly with him, he may relent. You turn pale, Mary; what ails my child?

Mary. Dear mother, it is nothing; it will soon be over—it must be done. I fear this young man. He has been described so wild, so reckless. I feel a sad foreboding—

Mrs. W. Fear not, Mary; call him to the door. Refuse to enter the house—give him the money, and tell him your sad story. He must, from family and association at least, have the manners of a gentleman—and however wild a youth may be when abroad among his associates, no gentleman ever insulted a friendless and unprotected woman.

Mary. You give me courage, dear mother. I should indeed be an unnaturel child, if—(aside)—yet I am agitated. Oh, why do I tremble thus? (puts on a village bonnet, &c.)

Mrs. W. (kisses her) Go forth, my child—go, as the dove flew from the ark of old, and if thou shouldst fail in finding the olive branch of peace, return, and seek comfort where thou shalt surely find it—in the bosom of thy fond and widowed mother.

(exit, R. D., and Mary, C. D.)

SCENE II.—Front and cut woods in C.

Enter, Lawyer Cribbs, L.

Crib. Well, that interview of mock sympathy and charity is over, and I flatter myself pretty well acted too, ha! ha! Yes, the widow and her child must quit the cottage—I'm resolved. First for the wrongs I years ago endured from old Wilson; and secondly, it suits my own interests: and in all cases, between myself and others, I consider the last clause as a clincher. Ha! here comes the girl—I must watch closely here.

(retires, L. 2 E.)

Mary enters, fearful and hesitating, L.

Mary. I have now nearly reached the old mansion house. In a few moments I shall see the young man, this dissipated collegian. Oh! my poor mother must be deceived! Such a man can have no pity for the children of poverty, misfortune's suppliants for shelter beneath the roof of his cottage—oh! my poor mother, little do you know the suffering that—ha! a gentleman approaches. My fears tell me this is the man I seek. Shall I ever have courage to speak to him? I will pause till he has reached the house.

(retires, gathering flowers, r.

Enter, Edward Middleton, R. 2 E., and Cribbs, L. 2 E., meeting.

Ed. Mr. Cribbs, your most obedient: any friends of my father are always welcome.

Crib. Well said, nobly said. I see your father before me, when I look on you.

Ed. You were enquiring for me, Mr. Cribbs?

Crib. I was. I wished to see you with regard to the cottage and lands adjoining. I have an opportunity of selling them. When last we talked upon this subject——

Ed. I was then ignorant that a poor widow (Mary at back, c., listening) and her only daughter——

Crib. Who are in arrears for rent——

Ed. Had lived there many years—that my father highly esteemed them—to turn them forth upon the world in the present condition of the old lady——

Crib. Which old lady has a claim upon the Aims-House.

(Mary shudders)
THE DRUNKARD.

Ed. In short, Mr. Cribbs, I cannot think of depriving them of a home, dear to them as the apple of their eyes—to send them forth from the flowers which they have reared, the vines which they have trained in their course—a place endeared to them by tender domestic recollections, and past remembrances of purity and religion.

Crib. Oh! all that and more—fences which they have neglected; the garden gate off the hinges; the limbs of the old birch tree broken down for firewood; the back windows ornamented with an old hat——

Ed. Cease, Mr. Cribbs; all this has been explained; my foster-brother, William, has told me the whole story. The trees were broken down by idle school-boys, and with regard to an old hat in the window, why, it was the hat of a man; can as much be said of yours, Mr. Cribbs?

Crib. You are pleased to be pleasant, to-day, sir. Good morning, sir; good morning.

(Exit L., muttering)

Ed. I'm sorry I offended the old man. After all, he was the friend of the family; though it is strange, my poor father almost always took his advice, and was invariably unfortunate when he did so.

(Re-enter Cribbs, L.)

Crib. Good morning again; beg pardon, sir. I now understand you better. You are right; the daughter—fine girl—eh! sparkling eyes, eh! dimples, roguish glances! Ah, when I was young, eh, ha? Well, never mind; you have seen her, eh?

Ed. Never; explain yourself, Mr. Cribbs.

Crib. If you have not seen her, you will, you know, eh! I understand. Traps for wild fowl; mother and daughter grateful; love-passion; free access to the cottage at all hours.

Ed. Cribbs, do you know this girl has no father?

Crib. That's it; a very wild flower, growing on the open heath.

Ed. Have you forgotten that this poor girl has not a brother?

Crib. A garden without a fence, not a stake standing. You have nothing to do but to step into it.

Ed. Old man! I respect your gray hairs. I knew an old man once, peace to his ashes, whose hair was as gray as yours; but beneath that aged breast there beat a heart, pure as the first throbs of childhood. He was as old as you—he was more aged; his limbs tottered as yours do not—I let you go in peace. But had that old man heard you utter such foul sentences to his son; had he heard you tell me to enter, like a wolf, this fold of innocence, and tear from her mother's arms the hope of her old age, he would have forgotten the winters that had dried the pith within his aged limbs, seized you by the throat, and dashed you prostrate to the earth, as too foul a carcass to walk erect and mock the name of man.

(Crosses, L.)

Crib. But, Mr. Middleton, sir——

Ed. Leave me, old man; begone; your hot, lascivious breath cannot mingle with the sweet odor of these ensnared wild flowers. Your raven voice will not harmonize with the warblings of these heavenly songsters, pouring forth their praises to that Almighty power, who looks with horror on your brutal crime.

(Crosses, R., Mary rushes forward, C., and kneels)

Mary. The blessings of the widow and fatherless be upon thee; may they accompany thy voice to Heaven's tribunal, not to cry for vengeance, but plead for pardon on this wretched man.
THE DRUNKARD.

Crib. Ha! The widow's daughter! Mr. Middleton, you mistake me. I—I cannot endure a woman's tears. I—poor child! (aside) I'll be terribly revenged for this. (exit CRIBBS, L. 2 E.)

Ed. This, then, is the widow's child, nurtured in the wilderness. She knows not the cold forms of the fashionable miscalled world. Cribbs, too, gone; a tale of scandal—I'll overtake the rascal, and at least give no color to his base fabrications. (crossing, and going, L.)

Mary. (n. Stay, sir, I pray you. I have an errand for you. This is part of the rent, which—

Ed. Nay, then, you have not overheard my discourse with the old man, who has just left us. I have told him—

Mary. That we should still remain in the cottage. Oh, sir! is that a reason we should withhold from you these dues? now paid with double pleasure, since we recognize a benefactor in our creditor—take this, I entreat, 'tis but a portion of the debt; but be assured, the remainder shall be paid as soon as busy, willing hands can earn it.

Ed. Nay, nay, dear girl; keep it as a portion of your dowry.

Mary. Sir!

Ed. If you overheard the dialogue that I just held with that old man, you must know that I sometimes speak very plain.

Mary. (apprehensively) Yes, sir.

Ed. I have spoken plainly to him; shall I now speak plainly to you?

Mary. Alas, sir! It is not our fault that the fences are broken down. When my poor father lived, it was not so. But since—

Ed. When that vile old man spoke to me of your charms, I heeded him not. There are plenty of pretty girls in this section of the country; but I have since discovered what I had before heard, something more than the ordinary beauty which he described. A charm that he is incapable of appreciating. The charm of mental excellence, noble sentiment, filial piety. These are the beauties that render you conspicuous above all the maidens I have seen. These are the charms which bind captive the hearts of men. I speak plainly, for I speak honestly, and when I ask you to keep that money as a portion of your dowry, need I say into whose hands I would like to have it fall at last.

Mary. (droops her head during the above) To affect—to affect not to understand you, sir, would be an idle return for kindness such as yours, and yet—

Ed. I sometimes walk down in the vicinity of your cottage, and—

Mary. Should I see you go by without stopping—why, then—

Ed. Then what, dear Mary?

Mary. Then I should suppose you had forgotten where we lived.

Ed. Thanks! (kisses her hand) Ah! little did I think when I thought of selling that dear old cottage, that it should be regarded as a casket, invaluable for the jewel it contained.

(leads her off, L. U. E.)

SCENE III.—Interior of Miss SPINDLE'S dwelling house.—Miss SPINDLE discovered at toilette table, L.

Miss S. The attractions of the fair sex are synonymous. True, old D-nus is the destroyer of female charms; but s my beautiful poet, Natty P. says, in his sublime epistle to Lucinda Octavia Pauline, "Age cannot wither me, nor custom stale my infinite vecuity." But time is money, then money is time, and we bring back by the aid of money, the times of youth. I value my beauty at fifty dollars a year, as that is about what it cost me for keeping it in repair year by year. Well, say that my beauty is repaired in this way, year by year; well, what then! I have heard a gentleman say that a pair of boots when repaired and foxed were better than they were when new. Why should it not be so with our charms? Certainly, they last longer in this way. We can have red cheeks at seventy, and thanks to the dentist, good teeth at any time of life. Woman was made for love. They suppose that my heart is unsusceptible of the tender passion. But the heart can be regulated by money, too. I buy all the affecting novels, and all the terrible romances, and read them till my heart has become soft as maiden wax, to receive the impression of that cherished image I adore. Ah! as true as I live, there goes his foster-brother, William, by the window. Hem, William!

(taps at window, c.—William sings without, l.

When I was a young and roving boy,
Where fancy led me I did wander,
Sweet Caroline was all my joy,
But I missed the goose and hit the gander."

Enter, William DOWTON, l.

Will. Good day, Miss Spindle.

Miss S. You heard my rap, William?

Will. As much as ever, Miss Spindle. Such fingers as yours don't make a noise like the fist of a butcher.

Miss S. My hand is small, William, but I did not suppose that you had noticed it.

Will. I only noticed it by the lightness of your tap. So I suppose you must be very light fingered.

Miss S. Pray, sit down, William; take a chair; don't be bashful; you're too modest.

Will. It's a failing I've got, Miss Spindle. I'm so modest I always go to bed without a candle.

Miss S. (r. c.) Shall I tell you what I have thought, William?

Will. (l. c.) Why that's just as you agree to with yourself. I don't care much about it, one way or t'other.

Miss S. You were singing as you came in, William. I suppose you know I sometimes invoke the help of Polyhymnia.

Will. Why, I don't know as to the help of Polyhym-him-nina, but if you want a good help, you can't do better than hire Polly Striker, old Farmer Jone's wife's daughter, by her first husband.

Miss S. You don't understand the Heathen mythology, William.

Will. Why, I hear Pardon Roundtext talk sometimes of the poor benighted heathen; but I am free to say, that I can't come anything in regard to their conchology, as you call it. Will you have some shell-barks, or chestnuts, Miss Spindle?

Miss S. No, William. But this is what I have thought. William, there are two sorts of men.

Will. Oh, yes, Miss Spindle, long ones and short ones, like cigars. Sometimes the short ones are the best smoking, too.

Miss S. You mistake my meaning, William. Some are warm and susceptible of the charms of women.
Will. Warm, oh, yes. Florida boys, and Carolina niggers, eh?

Miss S. While others are cold, and apparently insensible to our beauties—

Will. Oh, yes. Newfoundlanders, Canada fellows, and Blue noses.

Miss S. Now, William, dear William, this is the confession I would confide in your generous secrecy. I have a trembling affection, and then, a warm, yet modest flame.

Will. Trembling affection, warm flame, why, the old girl's got the fever and ague.

Miss S. And how to combat with this dear, yet relentless foe.

Will. Put your feet into warm water, and wood ashes, take two quarts of boiling hot arb tea. Cover yourself with four thick blankets, and six Canada comforters, take a good perspicacity and you'll be well in the morning.

Miss S. Sir!

Will. That's old Ma'am Brown's recipe for fever and ague, and I never yet found it fail.

Miss S. Fever and ague! You mistake me, William, I have an ardent passion.

Will. Don't be in a passion, Miss Spindle, it's bad for your complaint.

Miss S. You will not understand. I have a passion for one.

Will. For one! Well, it's lucky it's only one.

Miss S. Can you not fancy who that one is? He lives in your house.

Will. Well, I'm darned, Miss Spindle, it's either me or Mr. Middleton.

Miss S. I never can bestow my hand without my heart, William—

Will. Why, I think myself they ought to be included in the same bill of sale.

Miss S. Ah! William, have you ever read the "Children of the Abbey?"

Will. No, Miss Spindle, but I've read the "Babes of the Wood."

Miss S. I have read all the Romantics of the day. I have just finished Mr. Cooper's Trapper.

Will. (aside) Oh! I dare say she understands trap, but she don't come the trapper over my foster-brother this year.

Miss S. (aside) He understands little of the refinements of the civilized circular. I must try something else. (aloud) How do you like my new green dress? How does it become me?

Will. Beautiful! It matches very well indeed, ma'rm.

Miss S. Matches with what, William?

Will. With your eyes, ma'rm.

Miss S. It becomes my complexion, William.

Will. It's a beautiful match—like a span of grey horses.

Miss S. Does your master fancy green, William?

Will. Oh, yes, ma'rm. He loves it fine, I tell you.

Miss S. But in what respect. How did you find it out?

Will. In respect of drinking, ma'rm.

Miss S. Drinking!

Will. Yes. He always tells the cook to make green tea.

Miss S. Well, William, how about the cottage? When are you going to turn out those Wilsons?
Will. The girl will be out of that place soon, depend on that, ma'rm.

Miss S. I'm glad to hear it. I never could endure those Wilsons, and it's a duty when one knows that respectable people like your master are injured, to speak out. I know they haven't paid their rent, and do you know, that girl was seen getting into a chaise with a young man, when she ought to have been at work, and she did not return till nine o'clock at night, William, for I took the pains to put on my hood and cloak and look for myself—though it was raining awful.

Will. That was the time you cotched the fever, the fever and ague, ma'rm. Well, good bye.

Miss S. Are you going, William?

Will. Yes, ma'rm. I shall be wanted to hum. You take care of your precious health, ma'rm. Keep your feet warm, and your head cool; your mouth shut, and your heart open, and you'll soon have good health, good conscience, and stand well on your pins, ma'rm. Good morning, ma'rm.

"To reap, to sow, to plough and mow,
And be a farmer's boy, and be a farmer's boy."

(exit William, L.

Miss S. The vulgar creature! But what could I expect? He ought to know that American ladies ought never to have any pins. But I am certain for all this, Edward, dear Edward, is dying for me—as the poet, Dr. Lardner, says: "He lets concealment, like a worm in the bud, fed on the damask curtains of—his—cheek"—damask bud. I'm quite sure it's something about bud. Yes, I am convinced, my charms as yet are undecayed, and even when old age comes on, the charm of refined education will still remain—as the immortal Chelsea Beach poet has it:

"You may break, you may ruin the vase, if you will,
The scent of the roses will cling round it still."

(exit, affectedly, R.

SCENE IV.—Landscape View.

Enter, Patience Brayton, Sam Evans, Old Johnson, male and female villagers, R. U. E.—Music.

Pa. Come, there's young men enough, let's have a ring-play.

All. Yes, a ring-play. A ring-play! fall in here.

Sam. Come, darnation, who'll go inside?

Pa. Go in yourself, Sam.

Sam. Well, I'm agreed. Go on.

(they form a circle and revolve round the young man, singing

"I am a rich widow, I live all alone,
I have but one son, and he is my own.
Go, son, go, son, go choose you one,
Go choose a good one, or else choose none."

Sam chooses one of the girls—She enters the ring—he kisses her, and the ring goes round.
"Now, you are married you must obey
Now you are married you must prove true,
As you see others do, so do you."

The ring goes round—Patience, who is in the ring, chooses Old Johnson.

Patience—

"Mercy on me, what have I done?
I've married the father instead of the son.
His legs are crooked, and ill put on,
They are all laughing at my old man."

(a general laugh)

Sam. Come, girls, you forget 'tis almost time for Mary Wilson's wedding.

Pa. (R. C.) Well, now, ain't we forgetting; how proud she must be, going to marry a college-bred.

John. (L. C.) She'll be none the better for that. Larning don't buy the child a new frock.

Sam. Well, let's have a dance, and be off at once.

All. Yes. Partners. A dance! a dance!

(a village dance, and exit, l.

Enter, Lawyer Cribbs, l.

Crib. Thus ends my prudent endeavors to get rid of those Wilsons. But, young Middleton, there is yet some hope of him. He is at present annoyed at my well intended advice, but that shall not part us easily. I will do him some unexpected favor, worm myself into his good graces, invite him to the village bar-room, and if he falls, then, ha! ha! I shall see them begging their bread yet. The wife on her bended knees to me, praying for a morsel of food for her starving children—it will be revenge, revenge! Here comes his foster-brother, William. I'll wheedle him—try the ground before I put my foot on it.

Enter, William Dowton, whistling, l.

Will. Lawyer Cribbs, have you seen my poor, little half-witted sister, Agnes, eh?

Crib. No, William, my honest fellow, I have not. I want to speak to you a moment.

Will. (crossing, r.; aside) What does old Razor Chops want with me, I wonder. (aloud) Well, lawyer, what is it?

Crib. You seem to be in a hurry. They keep you moving, I see.

Will. These are pretty busy times, sir. Mr. Edward is going to be married—that's a dose. (aside) Senna and salts.

Crib. Yes, yes, ahem! Glad to hear it.

Will. Yes, I thought you seemed pleased. (aside) Looks as sour as Sam Jones, when he swallowed vinegar for sweet cider.

Crib. I am a friend to early marriages, although I never was married myself. Give my best respects to Mr. Edward.

Will. Sir?

Crib. William, suppose I leave it to your ingenuity to get me an invitation to the wedding, eh? And here's a half dollar to drink my health.
THE DRUNKARD.

Will. No, I thank you, lawyer, I don't want your money.
Crib. Oh, very well; no offence meant, you know. Let's step into the tavern, and take a horn to the happiness of the young couple.

Will. Lawyer Cribbs, or Squire, as they call you, it's my opinion, when your uncle Beelzebub wants to bribe an honest fellow to do a bad action, he'd better hire a pettifogging bad lawyer to tempt him, with a counterfeit dollar in one hand, and a bottle of rum in the other. (exit, WILLIAM, R.
Crib. Ah, ah! You're a cunning scoundrel, but I'll fix you yet.
Agnes. (sings without, L.

"Brake and fern and cypress dell,
Where the slippery adder crawls."

Crib. Here comes that crazy sister of his. She knows too much for my happiness. Will the creature never die! Her voice haunts me like the spectre of the youth that was engaged to her; for my own purpose, I ruined, I triumphed over him—he fell—died in a drunken fit, and she went crazy. Why don't the Alms-House keep such brats at home?

Enter, Agnes, deranged, L.

Agnes.

"Brake and fern and cypress dell,
Where the slippery adder crawls,
By the old moss-covered walls."

For the old man has his grey locks, and the young girl her fantasies.

"Upon the heather, when the weather
Is as mild as May,
So they prance, as they dance,
And we'll all be gay."

But they poured too much red water in his glass. The lawyer is a fine man, ha, ha! He lives in the brick house yonder. But the will. Ah, ha, ha! the will——
Crib. (angrily) Go home, Agnes, go home.
Agnes. Home! I saw a little wren yesterday. I had passed her nest often. I had counted the eggs, they were so pretty—beautiful, so beautiful—rough Robin of the mill came this morning and stole them. The little bird went to her nest, and looked in—they were gone. She chirruped mournfully and flew away. She won't go home any more.
Crib. Agnes, who let you out? You distress the neighborhood with your muttering and singing. (threatening) I'll have you taken care of.
Agnes. There's to be a wedding in the village. I saw a coffin carried in full of bridal cake.

"And the bride was red with weeping, Cypress in her hair."

Can you tell why they cry at weddings? Is it for joy? I used to weep when I was joyful. You never weep, old man. I should have been married, but my wedding dress was mildewed, so we put off the marriage till another day. They'll make a new dress for me. They say he won't come again to me, and then the will, ha, ha, old man, the will.
THE DRUNKARD.

Crib. Ha, confusion! Get you gone, or thus—

(Seizes her and raises cane)

WILLIAM enters rapidly, R., and throws him round to R. corner.

Will. (L. C.) Why, you tarnation old black varmint! Strike my little, helpless, half-crazed sister! If it was not for your gray hairs, I'd break every bone in your black beetle body. If all I have heard be true, you'll have to account for—

Crib. (Rising, R.) You'll rue this, young man, if there's any law in the land. A plain case of assault and battery. I'll put you in jail. Predicaments, premonires, fifa's and fieri facias. I'll put you between stone walls.

(Exit blustering, R.)

Will. Put me between stone walls! If you'd have been put between two posts with a cross-beam long ago, you'd had your due, old land-shark. You stay here, darling Agnes, till I come back. Fiery faces, and predicaments! If I can get you near enough to a horse-pond, I'll cool your fiery face, I'll warrant.

(Exit, R.)

Agnes. (Scattering flowers and singing—)

“They lived down in the valley,
Their house was painted red,
And every day the robin came
To pick the crumbs of bread.”

But the grass does not wither when they die. I will sit down till I hear the bells that are far off, for then, I think of his words. Who says he did not love me? It was a good character he wanted of the parson. A girl out of place is like an old man out of his grave. (bells chime piano) They won't ask me to their merry-makings, now, though I washed my best calico in the brook.

“Walk up, young man, there's a lady here,
With jewels in her hair.”

(suddenly clasps her hands and screams) Water, water, hear him, cl., hear him cry for water; quick! he'll turn cold again! his lips are blue; water, water!

(Exit frantically, L.)

SCENE V.—A village—Exterior of a beautiful cottage, L.

Enter, procession, R. u. e., of villagers—EDWARD, MARY, MRS. WILSON—Clergyman, children with baskets of flowers—Bridesman and Bridesmaid, etc., etc.—Bells ringing—They enter, come down, R., to front, cross and up stage on L., singing chorus.

Hail, hail! happy pair!
Bells are ringing, sweet birds singing,
All around now speaks of bliss;
Bright roses bringing—flower flinging,
Peace, purity and happiness.

Ed. (L. C.) Dearest Mary, ah, how indeed, my own; words are too poor, too weak, to express the joy, the happiness that agitates my heart. Ah, dear, dear wife, may each propitious day that dawns upon thy future life, but add another flower to the rosy garland that now encircles thee.

Mary. (L.) Thanks, Edward, my own loved husband, thy benison is echoed from my inmost heart. Ah, neighbor Johnson, many thanks for your kind remembrance of your pupils. My dear friends, your children, too, are here.
John. (r.) Yes, my dear Mary, your happiness sheds its genial rays around old and young. Young man, I was a witness at your father's wedding. May your life be like his—an existence marked by probity and honor, and your death as tranquil. Mrs. Wilson, I remember your sweet daughter, when but a child of nine years, and that seems only yesterday.

Mary. Dear Patience, I am glad to see you, too, and who is this, your brother?

Pa. (l.) No. An acquaintance, that—

Sam. Yes. An acquaintance that—

Mary. Oh, yes, I understand.

Mrs. W. My dearest children, the blessings of a bereaved heart, rest, like the dews of heaven, upon you. Come, neighbors, this is a festival of joy. Be happy, I entreat.

Will. Well, if there's any one here happier than Bill Dowton, I should like to know it, that's all. Come, lads and lasses, sing, dance, and be merry.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A chamber in Miss Spindle's house—Lawyer Cribbs and Miss Spindle discovered, seated, c.

Crib. (l.) Be explicit, my dear madam; this is a most serious affair; breach of promise, marriage promise. How my heart bleeds for you, dear young lady, suffering virtue. But tell me the particulars.

Miss S. (r.) Oh, sir, why will you cause me to harrow up my feelings; my bleeding heart, by the recital of my afflictions. I have "let concealment like a caterpillar on a button wood, feed on my cambric cheek—and—and—(aside) I can't remember the rest of it.

Crib. Alas, poor lady! pray go on.

Miss S. The first of our acquaintance was clown at a corn-husking. Not that I make a practice of attending such vulgar places, Squire, but—

Crib. Oh, certainly not—certainly not.

Miss S. Well, I was over-persuaded. I set up and stripped the dry coatings from the yellow corn—only two ears—I husked no more, Squire.

Crib. Indeed, indeed! two ears—you are certain it was but two ears? It is best to be particular. We shall make out a prima facie case.

Miss S. Well, I got hold of a red ear, it was the last I husked. I think it was a red ear; so I was obliged to be kissed. Oh, Squire, think of my mortification, when I was told that such was the invariable rule—the custom at a husking.

Crib. (with energy) Your suffering must have been intolerable.

Miss S. Oh, sir, you know how to feel for delicate timidity. A big, coarse, young man, called Bill Bullus, rose up to snatch the fragrance from my unwilling cheek—

Crib. (groans) Oh!

Miss S. I put up my kerchief—it was a cambric, a fine cambric, Squire Cribbs, and said I had a choice in those things—looking at Edward, whom I took to be a gentleman, you know. He took the hint immediately. Bullus fell back, appalled at my manner, and Edward—oh, sir! spare my blushes.
THE DRUNKARD.

Crib. I understand—he—yes. I understand.

Miss S. He did it, sir. I felt the pressure of his warm lip on——

Crib. Your cheek, of course.

Miss S. Oh, no, no, sir. It was said, by my friend the Chelsea Beach Bard, that from my lips he stole ambrosial blisses.

Crib. Enormous! but go on.

Miss S. You may judge what was my confusion.

Crib. Certainly, Miss Spindle.

Miss S. The ear of corn was not more red than was my burnished cheek.

Crib. I do not know, my dear young lady, but you might make out a case of assault and battery.

Miss S. It was very rude for a college-bred. Well, after that he bowed to me as we were coming out of church.

Crib. Aha! the evidence comes in. Have you got proof of that, most injured fair one?

Miss S. Oh, sir, no proof would be required. I trust that a person of my respectability need bring no proof of what they know. Well, after that I was going down to Mr. Simmons, and lo, a cow stood in the road. I must pass within twenty feet of the ferocious cow if I continued my route providentially, at the very instant, Edward came down the road that turns up by Wollcott's mill. He saw my strait. He saw that I stood trembling like some fragile flower tossed by the winds of heaven. Like Sir William Wallace flying to the rescue of the Greeks, he came panting on the wings of love. He rushed like an armed castle to the side of the cow, and she wheeled about like the great leviathan of the deep, and trotted down towards the school-house.

Crib. I can imagine your feelings, Miss Spindle—a delicate young lady in imminent danger. But he did no more than any man would have done.

Miss S. Well, sir, you may judge what were the feelings of my palpitating heart, tender as it always was——

Crib. Have any letters passed between you?

Miss S. Oh, yes, yes; five or six, sir.

Crib. We've got him there, aha! If Miss Spindle would be so condescending as just to show me one of those letters.

Miss S. He's got them all in his possession.

Crib. Unfortunate! horrible! How did he obtain possession of those letters?

Miss S. Oh! I sent them—sometimes by one person, sometimes by another.

Crib. How, madam? His letters, I mean—how did he get——

Miss S. Oh, sir, mark his ingratitude! I sent him half a dozen——

Crib. (discouraged) Oh! I understand. The correspondence was all on one side, then?

Miss S. Not one letter did he write to me. Ah! sir, think of it; all my tenderness, all my devotion. Oh! my breaking heart!

Crib. (aside) Oh! humbug! (aloud) Well, good day, Miss Spindle. I have a pressing engagement, and——

Miss S. Well, but, lawyer Cribbs, what's your advice? How ought I to proceed?

Crib. Get your friends to send you to the insane hospital, and place you among the incurable, as the most rusty, idiotic old maid that ever knit stockings.

(exit hastily, r.)
THE DRUNKARD.

Miss S. Spirit of Lucretia Borgia! Polish pattern of purity—was there ever such a Yankee hedgehog! (exit angrily, r.)

SCENE II.—A Landscape.

Enter, William Dowton, r., Farmer Gates and Farmer Stevens, meeting.

Gates. (c.) Good day, good day. Mr. Edward was not at church last Sabbath.

Stev. I heard tell where he was in the afternoon.

Gates. Aye, Stevens, you told me. Well, well, I'm right sorry. We used to consider Mr. Edward a promising young man, and when we seen him get married and settle among us, we thought to have a respectable man like his father for a neighbor, and that, like him, he'd go to the general court one of these days. I earnestly hope he hain't going to stick to these bad ways.

Will. (r.) I don't exactly know what you mean, Farmer Gates. Mr. Middleton is about the same free, kind-hearted fellow that he ever was, it appears to me. No longer ago than this blessed morning, he says to me, "Bill," says he, "your birth-clay comes this day week; go to Ned Grogan's, the tailor, next the post-office, and get yourself measured for a new suit of clothes at my expense." Now if I, that lives with him, and sees everything he does, think well of him, I don't know as other folks need be so very perpendicular about it.

Stev. Well, well, I'll tell you what I have heard; you know Squire Cribbs?

Will. In course I does.

Stev. Well, he says that if your foster-brother doesn't attend a little more to his own interest——

Will. He'll do it for him, I suppose? Now, Mr. Stevens, I'll tell you what I think of that sly old fox, Squire Cribbs. He takes to wickedness just as natural as young ducks take to water. I think, really, if Mr. Edward's soul was put in a great box, that seven thousand such souls as that black beetle's wouldn't fill up the chinks—the spare room round the edges.

Gates. Give us your hand, Bill, my man. Lawyer Cribbs bears but a middling character hereabout. He has got a prodigious sight of larning, and 'tis not for the likes of me to pretend to decide between you; but I'll be darned if I don't like the man that stands up for him whose bread he eats; and so, Bill, any time you want a drink of cider, just call up our way, and you shall have what you can drink, if it's a gallon. (exit, r.)

Stev. Well, well, William, after all neighbor Gates has said, I fear the young man's in a dangerous way—spending his Sabbaths going about the country from one tavern to another. I don't say that he does take too much liquor—but there's a great many that has begun that way.

Will. (rather serious) Well, good bye to you, and thank ye. I don't think Mr. Edward drinks any too much—at least I hope not. For my part I wish he'd never seen anything stronger than milk or green tea. I wish I hadn't seen them two fellers, they've just made me feel as bad as ever, when I thought I was getting well over it, and beginning to see daylight again. What, dear Mr. Edward, with such a sweet lamb of a wife, and the prettiest little girl that ever drew breath—oh, no, it's nothing. I won't borrow trouble—he just took part of a bowl of punch with a friend at the Flying Horse—but that's no more than the parson himself might do, and there's Deacon Whitleather, he never sits down to dinner without a stiff horn of something to wash it down. Well, now, I think it's better let alone altogether—for if a man doesn't put his hand in the fire, he runs a better chance of not burning his fingers.

SCENE III.—A Country Bar-room—Stevens, the drover, seated at table—Several loafers—Landlord behind bar, attending.

Stev. (seated, r. c.) Well, I don't know, Mr. Landlord, them are 'counts we have about Queen Victory, amounts to just about as much as the frogs and mice.

Land. Oh, that's Pope; we've got the book in the house now—the battle of frogs and mice.

2d Loaf. Landlord, will you just score up another three-center—I feel denced bad.

Land. No, thank ye, Sam; rub off old scores and then——

Enter, Edward Middleton, dress rather shabby, from door, r.—

All look at him; he walks up to the bar.

Ed. Give me some brandy. (drinks) How much, landlord?

Land. A six-pence, sir. This is something s'perior; a bottle I keep for those who are willing to pay a little more—are you quite well, sir?

Ed. Well, well, quite well, I thank you—this is good, landlord, another glass.

Enter, Cribbs, r. d.

Crib. Ah! Mr. Middleton, you here! Ah! he! he! Well, come, that's a good one. First time I was ever here, except on business—dare say you can say the same. Well, this is fine. Now, my young friend, since we have met each other, we'll honor the house.

Land. Squire, how are you? glad to see you. (shakes hands across the bar) What's it to be, gentlemen? The same, Mr. Middleton?

Ed. Oh! I must be excused; you know I have just drank.

Crib. Well, well, I'll leave it to him. Landlord, how long is it since I've seen you?

Land. Why, Squire, it must be full ten years ago; you remember the day Si Morton had his raising? the day I saw you digging in the woods.

Crib. (starts violently) Go on, go on—nothing but the cramp. I'm subject to it.

Land. Well, Squire, I've never seen you since then.

Crib. Well, come, let's drink; come, Edward.

Land. Oh, take a little more, Mr. Middleton—the Squire wouldn't advise you to what wasn't right.

Ed. Well, I——

Crib. Well, come, here's whisky—good whisky.

Ed. I believe I drank——

Land. Mr. Middleton drank brandy before.

Crib. Not half so healthy as good whisky.
Ed. Oh, whisky be it. It can't be stronger than the other was. (Stevens looks up and shakes his head)

Ed. (drinks) Well, this is pleasant, ha! ha! this goes to the right place, eh, Cribbs? Is this Irish whisky?

Land. Yes, sir; pure Innishowen.

Ed. Well, the Irish are a noble people, ain't they, Cribbs? (Slightly intoxicated) Friend Cribbs, I think I may call you. I never doubted it.

Crib. Never!

Ed. Oh! I might have suspected; but "suspicion's but at best a coward's virtue;" the sober second thought—

Crib. Oh, exactly! (Shaking his hand earnestly)

Ed. I have a heart, Cribbs— (Getting tipsy) I have a heart; landlord, more whisky; come, gentlemen, come one, come all. Landlord!

Land. In a minute, sir.

Ed. Landlord, give them all anything they want. Come—a bumper—here's the health of my old tried friend, Cribbs.

(Drinks it off)

Crib. (Throwing away his liquor unseen) Well, here goes!

Ed. Landlord! Landlord!

Land. Sir?

Ed. I have a heart, Squibbs—a heart, my old boy. Come, let's have another horn—

(1st loaf—sleeps on bench, R., against partition)

Come, boys, trot up, I'll pay.

2d Loaf. Well, I don't want to hurt; the house.

3d Loaf. Oh, no—mustn't hurt the house!

(Stevens hits him down with whip)

Land. You will hurt the house, if you butt off the plastering at that rate

Ed. A bumper—well in the absence of Burgundy, whisky will do, eh, old Ribbs?— (Hitting Cribbs) Why don't you join us, old sulky?

(To Stevens)

Stev. I drink when I'm dry, and what I drink I pay for.

Ed. You're saucy, old fellow.

Stev. Do you think I'm a sponge to put my hands into another man's pocket? Go away, you make a fool of yourself!

Ed. A fool! Say that again, and I'll knock you down—a fool!

Stev. (Rising) I want nothing to say to you—he off—you're drunk!

Ed. (Strikes him) Death and fury! Drunk?

Stev. Take that, then! (Cribbs and others sneak off—struggle—Stevens hits him down with whip) Landlord, you see I was not to blame for this.

(Exit Stevens, R. D.)
Land. Well, he's got it, anyhow—serves him right, quarrelsome young fool. House was quiet enough till he came in disturbing honest people. This is too bad. How to get this fellow home? He lives two miles from here, at least.

Enter, William Dowton, R. D.

Will. Mr. Middleton—where is he? Lord ha' mercy, what is this? Speak! (seizes Landlord) If you have done this, I'll tear out your cursed windpipe, old heathen!

Land. In my own house? Let go my throat!

Will. Who did this?

Land. Let go; it wasn't me! It was drover Stevens.

Will. (throws him off, kneels by Middleton) Blood on his forehead—Mr. Edward, speak to me, oh, speak—his poor wife—poor, old, sick Mrs. Wilson, too!

Ed. (reviving) What is this? What's been the matter here?

Will. Don't you know me, sir? It's William, sir, poor Bill, come to help you home. Sam Stanhope told me you were in a row at the tavern, sir.

Ed. Oh, yes, I remember; where are they all? Where's Cribbs? where's Cribbs?

Will. Cribbs? (to Landlord) Was he with him?

Land. Why, yes, I guess the Squ're was here a short spell.

(to Edward) Well, you can walk, sir, can't you?

Ed. Walk, yes, I can walk—what's the matter with my head? Blood? I must have fallen against the corner of the bench!

Land. Don't you remember Mr. Stevens?

Ed. I don't know what you mean by Stevens; what the devil have I been about?

Land. Why, Stevens said you were drunk, and you hit him, and he knocked you down with his whip handle.

Will. And if I get hold of Mr. Stevens, I'll make him smell something nastier than peaches, or my name's not Bill! Come, sir; come home.

Ed. Drunk! fighting! Oh, shame! shame!

Will. Lean on me, Mr. Edward. You go sand your sugar, and water your bad brandy, old corkscrew! His poor wife!

Ed. Hush, William, hush!

Will. Prey give me your pardon, sir; oh, I wish I had died before I had seen this.

Ed. Drunk, fighting—my wife, my children! Oh, agony! agony! (exit leaning on William, L. D.—Landlord retires behind bar

Scene IV.—Landscape View.

Enter, Cribbs, L.

Crib. So far the scheme works admirably. I know his nature well. He has tasted, and will not stop now short of madness or oblivion. I mostly fear his wife, she will have great influence over him. Ah, who's this? Bill Dowton! Where, then, is Middleton? (retires, L.)
Enter, William Dowton, L.

Will. Well, I don't know but he's right; poor fellow, if he were to appear before his wife, without her being warned, it might frighten her to death, poor thing, and, as he says, the walk alone may do him good, and sober him a bit. The old woman takes on most cruel, too, and she so very, very ill. Here he comes. I guess he'll follow me. I'll hasten on, for if he sees me, he'll be angry, and swear I'm watching him. That old serpent Cribbs, he'd better keep out of my track. I'd think no more of wringing his old neck, than I would twisting a tough thanksgiving turkey.

(exit threatening, R. Crib, advancing cautiously)

I'm much obliged to you, most valiant Billy Dowton. I shall hold myself non est inventus. I promise you; here comes Edward! Caution, caution, (retires, L.

Enter, Edward, L.

Ed. Is this to be the issue of my life? Oh, must I ever yield to the fell tempter, and bending like a weak bulrush to the blast, still bow my manhood lower than the brute? Why, surely I have my eyes to see, hands to work with, feet to walk, and brain to think, yet the best gifts of Heaven I abuse, lay aside her bounties, and with my own hand, willingly put out the light of reason. I recollect my mother said, my dear, dying mother, they were the last words I ever heard her utter—"Whosoever lifts his fallen brother is greater far than the conqueror of the world." Oh, how my poor brain burns! my hand trembles! my knees shake beneath me! I cannot, will not appear before them thus; a little, a very little will revive and strengthen me. No one sees; William must be there ere this. Now for my hiding place. Oh! the arch cunning of the drunkard! (goes to tree R., and from the hollow draws forth a bottle; looks round and drinks. Cribbs behind, exulting) So, so, it relieves! it strengthens! oh, glorious liquor! Why did I rail against thee? Ha, ha! (drinks and draws bottle) All gone! all! (throws the bottle away) Of what use the casket when the jewel's gone? Ha, ha! I can face them now. (turns and meets Cribbs) He here! Confusion!

Crib. (L.) Why, Middleton! Edward, my friend, what means this?

Ed. (R.) Tempter! begone! Pretend not ignorance! Were you not there when that vile fray occurred? Did you not desert me?

Crib. As I am a living man, I know not what you mean. Business called me out. I left you jovial and merry, with your friends.

Ed. Friends! Ha! ha! the drunkard's friends! Well, well, you may speak truth—my brain wanders—I'll go home! Oh, misery! I can face them now. (turns and meets Cribbs) He here! Confusion!

Crib. Come, come, a young man like you should not think of dying. I am old enough to be your father, and I don't dream of such a thing.

Ed. You are a single man, Cribbs. You don't know what it is to see your little patrimony wasted away—to feel that you are the cause of sufferings you would die to alleviate.

Crib. Pooh, pooh! Suffering—your cottage is worth full five hundred dollars. It was but yesterday Farmer Amson was inquiring how much it could be bought for.
THE DRUNKARD.

Ed. Bought for! Cribbs—
Crib. Well, Edward, well.
Ed. You see your smoke curling up among the tree?
Crib. Yes, Edward. It rises from your own cottage.
Ed. You know who built that cottage, Cribbs?
Crib. Your father built it. I recollect the day. It was—
Ed. It was the very day I was born that your cottage was first inhabited. You know who lives there now?
Crib. Yes. You do.
Ed. No one else, Cribbs?
Crib. Your family, to be sure—
Ed. And you counsel me to sell it!—to take the warm nest from that mourning bird and her young, to strip them of all that remains of hope or comfort, to make them wanderers in the wide world, and for what? To put a little pelf into my leprous hands, and then squander it for rum.

(crosses, R.
Ed. You don't understand me, Edward. I am your sincere friend; believe me; come—
Ed. Leave me, leave me—
Crib. Why, where would you go thus, Edward?
Ed. Home! Home— to my sorrowing wife—her dying mother, and my poor, poor child.
Crib. But not thus, Edward, not thus. Come to my house, my people are all out. We'll go in the back way—no one will see you. Wash your face, and I'll give you a little—something to refresh you. I'll take care it shall not hurt you. Come, now, come.
Ed. Ought I—dare I? Oh, this deadly sickness! Is it indeed best?
Crib. To be sure it is! If the neighbors see you thus—I'll take care of you. Come, come, a little brandy—good—good brandy.
Ed. Well, I—I—
Crib. That's right—come. (Aside) He's lost! Come, my dear friend, come.

SCENE V.—Interior of the cottage as in Act I.

Enter MARY from set door, R. 2 E.—Her dress plain and patched, but put on with neatness and care—She is weeping.

Mary. Oh, Heaven, have mercy on me!—aid me!—strengthen me! Weigh not thy poor creature down with woes beyond her strength to bear. Much I fear my suffering mother never can survive the night, and Edward comes not, and when he does arrive, how will it be? Alas, alas! my dear, lost husband! I think I could nerve myself against everything, but—oh, misery! this agony of suspense! it is too horrible!

Enter JULIA from room, R. 2 E.—She is barefooted—Dress clean, but very poor.

Julia. Mother! dear mother, what makes you cry? I fear so sorry when you cry—don't cry any more, dear mother.
Mary. (L.) I cannot help it, dearest. Do not tell your—or father what has happened in his absence, Julia.
THE DRUNKARD.

Jul. No, dear mother, if you wish me not. Will it make him cry, mother? When I see you cry it makes me cry, too.

Mary. Hush, dear one, hush! Alas, he is unhappy enough already.

Jul. Yes. Poor father! I cried last night when father came home, and was so sick. Oh, he looked so pale, and when I kissed him for good night, his face was as hot as fire. This morning he could not eat his breakfast, could he? What makes him sick so often, mother?

Mary. Hush, sweet one!

Jul. Dear grandma so sick, too. Doctor and nurse both looked so sorry. Grandma won't die to-night, will she, mother?

Mary. Father of mercies! This is too much! (weeps) Be very quiet, Julia, I am going in to see poor grandma. (crossing, R.) Oh, Religion! sweet solace of the wretched heart! Support me! aid me, in this dreadful trial. (exit into room, R. 2 E.

Jul. Poor, dear mother. When grandma dies, she'll go to live in heaven, for she's good. Parson Heartall told me so, and he never tells fibs, for he is good, too.

Enter, William, gently, D. in F.

Will. Julia, where is your mother, darling? (JULIA puts her fingers on her lip, and points to door) Ah, she comes!

Re-enter, Mary, R. 2 E.

Will. How is poor Mrs. Wilson now, madam?

Mary. Near the end of all earthly trouble, William. She lies in broken slumber. But where is my poor Edward? Have you not found him?

Will. Yes, ma'am, I found him in the ta—in the village—he had fallen, and slightly hurt his forehead; he had me come before so as you should not be frightened. He'll soon be here now.

Mary. Faithful friend! I wish you had not left him. Was he—oh, what a question for a doating wife—was he sober, William?

Will. I must not lie, dear lady. He had been taking some liquor, but I think not much—all, I hope, will be well.

Ed. (sings without) "Wine cures the gout," etc., Ha! ha!

Mary. Oh, great Heaven!

William rushes out, c. d., and off, L. U. E., and re-enters with Edward, drunk and noisy—William trying to soothe him; he staggers as he passes the door way.

Ed. I've had a glorios time, Bill. Old Cribbs—

Mary. (r.) Hush! dearest!

Ed. Why should I be silent? I am not a child, I—

Mary. My mother, Edward, my dear mother!

Ed. (sink into chair) Heaven's wrath on my hard heart. I—I forgot. How is she? Poor woman; how is she?

Mary. Worse, Edward, worse. (trying to hide her tears)

Ed. And I in part the cause. Oh, horrid vice! Bill, I remember my father's death-bed; it was a Christian's faith in his heart; hope in his calm, blue eye; a smile upon his lip; he had never seen his Edward drunk. Oh, had he seen it—had he seen it!
THE DRUNKARD.

Jul. (crossing to her father from r. to c.) Father, dear father! (striving to kiss him

Ed. Leave me, child, leave me. I am hot enough already. (she weeps, he kisses her) Bless you, Julia dear, bless you! Bill, do you remember the young elm tree by the arbor in the garden?

Will. Yes, sir.

Ed. Well, I slipped and fell against it, as I passed the gate. My father planted it on the very day I saw the light. It has grown with my growth; I seized the ax and felled it to the earth. Why should it flourish when I am lost forever? (hysterically) Why should it lift its head to smiling heaven while I am prostrate? Ha, ha, ha! (a groan is heard, r. d.—exit MARY—a pause—a shriek

Enter, MARY.

Mary. Edward, my mother——

Ed. Mary!

Mary. She is dead!

Ed. Horror! And I the cause? Death, in the house, and I without doubt the means. I cannot bear this; let me fly——

Mary. (springing forward and clasping his neck) Edward, dear Edward, do not leave me! I will work, I will slave, anything; we can live; but do not abandon me in my misery: do not desert me, Edward, love! husband!

Ed. Call me not husband—curse me as your destroyer; loose your arms—leave me.

Mary. No, no! do not let him go. William, hold him!

Will. (holding him) Edward, dear brother!

Jul. (clinging to him) Father! father!

Mary. You will be abused. No one near to aid you. Imprisoned, or something worse, Edward.

Ed. Loose me; leave me; why fasten me down on fire? Madness is my strength; my brain is liquid flame! (breaks from her—wILLIAM IS OBLIGED TO CATCH HER) Ha! I am free. Farewell, forever! (rushes off, c. d. (faints Mary. Husband! Oh, Heaven!

Will. (bursting into tears) Edward! brother!

Jul. Father, father!

(runs to the door, and falls on the threshold

——

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Broadway.

Enter, Lawyer Cribbs, r.

Crib. I wonder where that drunken vagrant can have wandered. Ever since he came to New York, thanks to his ravenous appetite and my industrious agency, he has been going down hill rapidly. Could I but tempt him to some over act, well managed, I could line my own pockets, and insure his ruin. Ha! here he comes, and two of his bright companions. He looks most wretchedly. Money gone, and no honest way to raise it. He'll be glad to speak to old Cribbs now. I must watch my time. (returning Enter, Edward and two loafers.

1st Loaf. Cheer up, Ned; there's more money where the last came from.

Ed. (clothes torn and very shabby, hat the same) But I tell you my last cent is gone. I feel ill. I want more liquor.

1st Loaf. Well, well, you wait round here a spell. Joe and I will take a turn down to Cross street. (crosses, L.) We'll make a raise, I warrant you.

Ed. Well, be quick then; this burning thirst consumes me.

Crib. (advancing, L) Why! is that you, Mr. Middleton?

Ed. (R.) Yes, Cribbs, what is left of me.

Crib. Why, I don't see that you are much altered; though you might be better for a stitch or two in your elbows——

Ed. Ah, Cribbs, I have no one to care for me. I am lost; a ruined, broken-hearted man.

Crib. You won't be offended, Middleton, will you? Allow me to lend you a dollar or two when you want it; ask me—there, there! (offering it; aside) Before sundown he's a few yards nearer his grave.

Ed. (slowly taking it, struggling with pride and necessity) Thank you, Mr. Cribbs, thank ye; you are from the village. I hardly dare ask you if you have seen them.

Crib. Your wife and child? Oh, they are doing charmingly. Since you left, your wife has found plenty of sewing, the gentle-folks have become interested in her pretty face, and you know she has a good education. She is as merry as a cricket, and your little girl blooming as a rose and brisk as a bee.

Ed. Then Mary is happy?

Crib. Happy as a lark!

Ed. (after a pause) Well, I ought to be glad of it and since she thinks no more of me——

Crib. Oh, yes, she thinks of you occasionally.

Ed. Does she, indeed?

Crib. Yes, she says she cannot but pity you. But that Heaven never sends affliction without the antidote, and that, but for your brutal—hem!—your strange conduct and drunkenness—hem!—misfortune, she should never have attracted the sympathy of those kind friends, who now regard her as the pride of their circle,

Ed. (musing) It is very kind of her—very—very kind! pities me! respectable! But, Cribbs, how can one become respectable, without a cent in his pocket, or a whole garment on his wretched carcass?

Crib. (pause) There are more ways than one to remedy these casualties. If the world uses you ill, be revenged upon the world!

Ed. Revenged! But how, Cribbs, how?

Crib. (cautiously) Do you see this paper? 'Tis a check for five thousand dollars. You are a splendid penman. Write but the name of Arden Rencelaw, and you may laugh at poverty.

Ed. What! forgery? and on whom? The princely merchant! the noble philanthropist! the poor man's friend! the orphan's benefactor! Out and out on you for a villain, and coward! I must be sunk indeed, when you dare propose such a baseness to my father's son. Wretch as I am, by the world despised, shunned and neglected by those who should save and succor me, I would sooner perish on the first dunghill—than that my dear child should blush for her father's crimes. Take back your base bribe, miscalled charity; the maddening drink that I should purchase with it, would be redolent of sin, and rendered still more poisonous by your foul hypocrisy. (throws down the money)

Crib, (bursting with passion) Ah, you are warm, I see. You'll think better when—when you find yourself starving. (exit, L.

Ed. Has it then come to this?—an object of pity to my once adored wife; no longer regarded with love—respect—but cold compassion, pity; other friends have fully made up my loss. She is flourishing, too, while I am literally starving—starving—this cold-blooded fiend, too; what's to become of me? Deserted, miserable—but one resource. I must have liquor—ha!—my handkerchief—'twill gain me a drink or two, at all events. Brandy, aye, brandy, brandy!

(rushes off, R.

SCENE II. —A Street. —Stage half dark.

Enter, Cribbs, R.

Crib. Plague take the fellow! who would have thought he would have been so foolishly conscientious? I will not abandon my scheme on the house of Rencelaw, though the speculation is too good to be lost. Why! as I live here comes that old fool, Miss Spindle.

Enter, Miss Spindle, L., her dress a ridiculous compound of by-gone days, and present fashions.

Miss S. Why! this New York is the most awful place to find one's way I was ever in; it's all ups and downs, ins and outs. I've been trying for two hours to find Trinity Church steeple—and I can't see it, though they tell me it's six hundred yards high,

Crib. Why! angelic Miss Spindle, how do you do? How long have you been in the commercial emporium?

Miss S. Oh, Squire Cribbs, how d'ye do? I don't know what you mean by the uproarium, but for certain it is the noisiest place I ever did see. But, Squire, what has become of the Middletons, can you tell?

Crib. I've had my eye upon them; they're down, Miss Spindle, never to rise again; as for that vagrant, Edward—

Miss S. Ah! Squire! what an escape I had! How fortunate that I was not ruined by the nefarious influence, the malignant corrosations of his illimitable seductions. How lucky that prim Miss Mary Wilson was subjected to his hideous arts, instead of my virgin immaculate innocence!

Crib. Do you know why his wife left the village and came to New York?

Miss S. Oh, she is low, degraded! She sank so far as to take in washing to feed herself and child. She would sooner follow her drunken husband, and endeavor to preserve him as she said, than remain where she was.
Crib. Well, well, they are down low enough now. Which way are you going, towards Broadway? Why, I'm going towards Broadway myself. Allow me the exquisite honor of beaing you—this way, perfection of your sex, and adoration of ours—your arm, lovely and immaculate Miss Spindle. (exit together, arm in arm, L.

Enter, Edward and 1st and 2d Loafer, R.

1st Loaf. To be sure I did! I swore if he didn't let me have two or three dollars, I'd tell his old man of last night's scrape, and I soon got it to get rid of me.

2d Loaf. Hurrah for snakes! Who's afraid of fire? Come, Ned, two or three glasses will soon drive away the blue devils. Let's have some brandy.

Ed. With all my heart. Brandy be it. Since I am thus abandoned—deserted—the sooner I drown all remembrance of my wretchedness the better. Come! boys, brandy be it. Hurrah!

Omnes. (sings) "Here's a health to all good lasses!" (exeunt, R.

SCENE III.—Interior of the Arbor on Broadway—Two men playing at backgammon—Another reading paper and smoking—Others seated around, etc.

Enter, Edward and Loafer, R., singing,—"Here's a health," etc.

Bar-keeper. (behind bar) The same noisy fellows that were here last night. What is it to be, gentleman?

Ed. Oh, brandy for me—brandy.

1st Loaf. Give me a gin-sling—that's what killed Goliah; ha, ha, ha!

2d Loaf. I'll have brandy. Come, old fellows, tread up, and wet your whistles. I'll stand, Sam, tread up.

Edward and others after drinking, dance and sing, "Dan Tucker," "Boatman dance," etc.

Bar-keeper. I must civilly request, gentlemen, that you will not make so much noise; you disturb others—and we wish to keep the house quiet.

Ed. Steady, boys, steady; don't raise a row in a decent house. More brandy, young man, if you please. Come, Bill, try it again.

1st Loaf. With all my heart, hurrah!

Ed. and 2d Loaf. "Dance, Boatman, dance," etc. (laugh) More brandy, hurrah!

Bar-keeper. I tell you once for all, I'll not have this noise. Stop that singing.

2d Loaf. I shan't; we'll sing as long as we please—give me some liquor.

Ed. Aye, more brandy—brandy.

Bar-keeper. Well, will you be still, then, if I give you another drink?

Ed. Oh, certainly, certainly.

1st Loaf. In course we will—

Bar-keeper. Well, help yourselves.

2d Loaf. What's yours, Ned?

Ed. Oh, brandy—here goes! (hands decanters

1st Loaf. Here goes for the last. (fills and drinks
THE DRUNKARD.

Omnes. (singing) "We won't go home till morning;" etc.

Man. (at table playing checkers) Look here! that's my king.

2d Man. (at table) You're a liar! I have just jumped him.

1st Man. (at table) I tell you, you lie! (regular wrangle)

Ed. and Loaf. Go it, you cripples! (singing and laughing)

Bar-keeper. Stop that noise, I tell you. Come, get out! (pushing man from table—two men fight)

Ed. and Loaf. Go it, Charley! Hurrah, etc. (regular scene of confusion—Bar-room fight, etc.—Scene changes)

SCENE IV.—Exterior of a Bar-room on the Five Points—Noise inside—Cribbs enters and listens at door.

Crib. So, a regular bar-room fight. Middleton must be secured—here's the watch. (enter, 2d watchman—exit Cribbs, l.)

Edward, watchman and loafers enter struggling, singing, shouting, etc., etc.—Exit fighting—Clubs are heard in all directions—First and second loafers enter clinching each other and fighting—Several knock-downs; square off, recognizing each other.

1st Loaf. Why, Sam, is that you?

2d Loaf. Why, Ned, my dear fellow, is that you?

1st Loaf. (who has his hat knocked entirely over his head, crown out) To be sure it is; look here, you've completely caved in my best beaver.

2d Loaf. Well, I ask your pardon. (exeunt arm in arm, R.)

SCENE V.—A wretched garret—Old table and chair with lamp burning dimly—Mary in miserable apparel, sewing on shop-work; a wretched shawl thrown over her shoulders—Child sleeping on straw bed on the floor, R., covered in part by a miserable ragged rug—Half a loaf of bread on table—The ensemble of the scene indicates want and poverty.

Mary. Alas, alas! It is very cold—faint with hunger—sick—heart weary with wretchedness, fatigue, and cold. (clocks strikes one) One o'clock, and my work not near finished. I—they must be done to-night. These shirts I have promised to hand in to-morrow by the hour eight. A miserable quarter of a dollar will repay my industry, and then my poor, poor child, thou shalt have food.

Jul. (awakening) Oh, dear mother, I am so cold. (Mary takes shawl from her shoulders, and spreads it over the child) No, mother—keep the shawl. You are cold, too. I will wait till morning, and I can warm myself at Mrs. Brien's fire; little Dennis told me I should for the gingerbread I gave him.

Goes to sleep murmuring—Mary puts the shawl on herself, waits till the child slumbers, and then places it over Julia, and returns to work.

Mary. Alas! where is he on this bitter night? In vain have I made every inquiry, and cannot gain any tidings of my poor, wretched husband; no one knows him by name. Perhaps already the inmate of a prison. Ah, merciful heaven, restore to me my Edward once again, and I will endure every ill that can be heaped upon me. (looks towards child) Poor Julia, she sleeps soundly; she was fortunate to-day, sweet lamb, while walking in the street in search of a few shaving, she became benumbed with cold. She sat down upon some stone steps, when a boy moved with compassion, took from his neck a handkerchief, and placed it upon hers; the mother of that boy is blessed. With the few cents he slipped into her hands, she purchased a loaf of bread; she ate part of it. (taking bread from table) And the rest is here. (looks eagerly at it) I am hungry—horribly hungry. I shall have money in the morning. (pause) No, no; my child will wake and find her treasure gone. I will not rob my darling. (replaces bread on table, sinks into chair, weeping) That ever I should see his child thus! for myself, I could bear, could suffer all.
THE DRUNKARD.

JULIA awakes noiselessly, perceiving shawl, rises and places it over her mother's shoulders.

Jul. Dear mother, you are cold. Ah, you tried to cheat your darling.

Mary. (on her knees; aside) Now, heaven be praised. I did not eat that bread.

Jul. Why, mother, do you sit up so late? You cry so much, and look so white—mother, do not cry. Is it because father does not come to bring us bread? We shall find father bye and bye, shan't we, mother?

Mary. Yes, dearest—yes, with the kind aid of Him. (knock at the door, l.) Who can that be? Ah, should it be Edward.

Enter, CRIBBS—she gets c.

Crib. (l.) Your pardon, Mrs. Middleton, for my intrusion at this untimely hour, but friends are welcome at all times and seasons, eh? So, so, you persist in remaining in these miserable quarters? When last I saw you, I advised a change.

Mary. Alas! sir, you too well know my wretched reasons for remaining. But why are you here at this strange hour; oh, tell me, know you ought of him? Have you brought tidings of my poor Edward.

Crib. (avoiding direct answer) I must say your accommodations are none of the best, and must persist in it, you would do well to shift your quarters.

Mary. Heaven help me! where would you have me go? Return to the village, I will not. I must remain and find my husband.

Crib. This is a strange infatuation, young woman; it is more strange, as he has others to console him, whose soft attentions he prefers to yours.

Mary. What do you mean, sir?

Crib. I mean, that there are plenty of women, not of the most respectable class, who are always ready to receive presents from wild young men like him, and are not very particular in the liberties that may be taken in exchange.

Mary. Man, man, why dost thou degrade the form and sense the Great One has bestowed on thee by falsehood? Gaze on the sharp features of that child, where famine has already set her seal, look on the hollow eyes, and the careworn form of the hapless being that brought her into life, then if you have the heart, further insult the helpless mother, and the wretched wife.
THE DRUNKARD.

Crib. These things I speak of, have been, and will be again, while there are wantons of one sex, and drunkards of the other.

Mary. Sir, you slander my husband. I know this cannot be. It is because he is poor, forsaken, reviled, and friendless, that thus I follow him, thus love him still.

Crib. He would laugh in his drunken ribaldry, to hear you talk thus.

Mary. (with proud disdain) Most contemptible of earth-born creatures, it is false. The only fault of my poor husband, has been intemperance, terrible, I acknowledge, but still a weakness that has assailed and prostrated the finest intellects of men who would scorn a mean and unworthy action.

Crib. Tut, tut. You are very proud, considering (looking round) all circumstances. But come, I forgive you. You are young and beautiful, your husband is a vagabond. I am rich, I have a true affection for you, and with me—

(attempts to take her hand)

Mary. Wretch! (throws him off) Have you not now proved yourself a slanderer, and to effect your own vile purposes? But know, despicable wretch, that my poor husband, clothed in rags, covered with mire, and lying drunk at my feet, is a being whose shoes you are not worthy to unloose.

Crib. Nay, then, proud beauty, you shall know my power—'tis late, you are unfriended, helpless, and thus—

(he seizes her, child screams

Mary. Help! mercy!

(she struggles, crosses, r.,—Cribbs follows her

Enter, WILLIAM, hastily, L., seizes Cribbs, and throws him round to L.—he falls.

Will. Well, Squire, what's the lowest you'll take for your rotten carcass? Shall I turn auctioneer, and knock you down to the highest bidder? I don't know much of pronology, but I've a great notion of playing Yankee Doodle on your organ of rascality. Be off, you ugly varmint, or I'll come the steam ingine, and set your paddles going all-fired quick.

Crib. I'll be revenged, if there's law or justice.

Will. Oh, get out! You're a bad case of villainy versus modesty and chastity, printed in black letters, and bound in calf; off with you, or I'll serve a writ of ejectment on you, a posteriori to you—I learnt that much from Mr. Middleton's law books.

Crib. But I say, sir—I am a man—

Will. You are a man? Nature made a blunder. She had a piece of refuse garbage, she intended to form into a hog, made a mistake, gave it your shape, and sent it into the world to be miscalled man. Get out! (pushes him off, L.—noise of falling down stairs—re-enters) I did not like to hit him before you, but he's gone down those stairs, quicker than he wanted to, I guess.

Mary. Kind, generous friend, how came you here so opportunely?

Will. Why, I was just going to bed, at a boarding-house close by Chatham street, when I happened to mention to the landlord, a worthy man as ever broke bread, about you; he told me where you was. I thought you might be more comfortable there, and his good wife has made everything as nice and pleasant for you, as if you were her own sister. So come, Mrs. Middleton, come, Julia, dear.
THE DRUNKARD.

Mary. But, William, my poor husband. (clubs, r. and L.

Will. There's another row. Well, if this New York isn't the awfullest place for noise. Come, Mrs. Middleton, I'll find him if he's in New York, jail or no jail, watch-house or no watch-house.

Mary. Heaven preserve my poor, dear Edward! (exit, L.

SCENE VI.—The Five Points—Stage dark, clubs, r. and L.—Enter, Edward Middleton, in the custody of two watchman—he is shouting—William Dowton, enters, hastily, knocks down watchman, rescues Edward, and they exit, r.

Enter, Cribbs, with coat torn half off, and dancing, fighting about stage, from L. U. E.

Crib. Oh, my! Oh, good gracious! How can I get out of this scrape? I came here with the best intentions. Oh, my! to see the law put in force! Oh, dear! somebody has torn my coat tail—good gracious! Lord have mercy! I've lost my hat—no, here it is.

Picks up dreadful shabby hat and puts it on, runs from one side to another.

Enter, Watchmen and mob, meeting him from r.

Will. (pointing out Cribbs to watchmen) That's the chap, the worst among 'em! (they seize Cribbs

Crib. I'm a respectable man!

They pick him up bodily and carry him off, r., shouting—he exclaims, "I'm a lawyer!" "I'm a respectable man!" etc.—William follows laughing—General confusion.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A wretched out-house or shed, supposed to be near a tavern, early morning—Stage dark—Edward discovered lying on ground, without hat or coat, clothes torn, eyes sunk and haggard, appearance horrible, etc., etc.

Ed. (awakening) Where am I? I wonder if people dream after they are dead? hideous! hideous! I should like to be dead, if I could not dream—parched! parched! 'tis morning, is it, or coming night, which? I wanted daylight, but now it has come, what shall I do in daylight? I was out of sight when it was dark—and seemed to be half hidden from myself—early morning, the rosy hue of the coming sunshine, veiling from mortal sight the twinkling stars—what horrid dreams; will they return upon me, waking? Oh, for some brandy! rum! I am not so ashamed, so stricken with despair, when I am drunk. Landlord, give me some brandy. What horrid place is this? Pain! dreadful pain! Heavens, how I tremble! Brandy! brandy! (sinks down in agony

THE DRUNKARD.

Enter, LANDLORD, with whip, r.

Land. Where in nature can my horse be gone? Is there nobody in this place? Hallo!

Ed. Hallo! Landlord, I say!

Land. What's that? Oh! I say, have you seen my horse? What—as I live, that scape-gallows, Middleton; how came he here? (aside) I thought he was in Sing-Sing.

Ed. Oh! I know you, you needn't draw back—we have been acquainted before now, eh? Mr.—

Land. (aside) Zounds! he knows me! (aloud) Yes, yes, we were acquainted once, as you say, young man; but that was in other days.

Ed. You are the same being still—though I am changed—mis-erably changed—you still sell rum, don't you?

Land. I am called a respectable inn-keeper; few words are best, young fellow. Have you seen a horse saddled and bridled near here?

Ed. I've seen nothing—you are respectable, you say. You speak as if you were not the common poisoner of the whole village; am not I, too, respectable?

Land. (laughs rudely) Not according to present appearances. You were respectable once, and so was Lucifer—like him you have fallen past rising. You cut a pretty figure, don't you? ha! ha! What has brought you in this beastly condition, young man?

Ed. (springing up) You! Rum! Eternal curses on you! Had it not been for your infernal poison shop in our village, I had been still a man—the foul den, where you plunder the pockets of your fellow, where you deal forth in tumblers, and from whence goes forth the blast of ruin over the land, to mildew the bright hope of youth, to fill the widow's heart with agony, to curse the orphan, to steal the glorious mind of man, to cast them from their high estate of honest pride, and make them—such as I. How looked I when first I entered your loathsome den, and how do I look now? Where are the friends of my happy youth? where is my wife? where is my child? They have cursed me; cursed me, and forsaken me?

Land. Well, what brought you to my house? You had your senses then; I did not invite you, did I?

Ed. Doth hell send forth cards of invitation for its horrid orgies. Sick and faint—make me some amends, my brain is on fire. My limbs are trembling—give me some brandy—brandy. (seizes him)

Land. How can I give you brandy? my house is far from here. Let me go, vagabond!

Ed. Nay, I beseech you—only a glass, a single glass of brandy, rum—anything—give me liquor, or I'll—

Land. Villain! let go your hold!

Ed. Brandy! I have a claim on you, a deadly claim! Brandy, brandy! or I'll throttle you! (choking him)

Land. (struggling) Help! murder! I am choking! help!

Enter, WILLIAM DOWTON, r.

Will. Good Lord! what is this? Edward, Edward!

(EDWARD releases LANDLORD and falls, r.

Land. You shall pay for this—villain! you shall pay for this! (exit, hastily, l.)
Ed. (on ground in delirium) Here, here, friend, take it off, will you?—these snakes, how they coil round me. Oh, how strong they are! there, don't kill it, no, no, don't kill it! give it brandy, poison it with rum, that will be a judicious punishment, that would be justice, ha, ha! justice! ha, ha!

Will. He does not know me.

Ed. Hush! gently—gently, while she's asleep. I'll kiss her. She would reject me, did she know it, hush! there, heaven bless my Mary, bless her and her child—hush! if the globe turns round once more, we shall slide from it's surface into eternity. Ha, ha! great idea! A boiling sea of wine, fired by the torch of fiends! ha! ha!

Will. He's quite helpless. Could I but gain assistance, he can not move to injure himself. I must venture.

(Exit, rapidly and noiselessly, R.)

Ed. So, so; again all's quiet; they think I cannot escape. I cheated them yesterday—'tis a sin to steal——

Enter, Mr. Rencelaw, R.

—but no crime to purloin sleep from a druggist's store—none—none. (Produces phial) Now for the universal antidote, the powerful conqueror of all earthly care—death! (About to drink: Rencelaw seizes phial and casts it from him) Ha! who are you, man? what would you?

Rencelaw. Nay, friend, take not your life, but mend it.

Ed. Friend, you know me not. I am a fiend, the ruin of those who loved me; leave me.

Rencelaw. I came not to upbraid, or insult you. I am aware of all your danger, and come to save you. You have been drinking.

Ed. That you may well know. I am dying now for liquor—and—and—will you give me brandy? Who are you that takes interest in an unhappy vagabond, neither my father nor my brother?

Rencelaw. I am a friend to the unfortunate. You are a man, and if a man, a brother.

Ed. A brother! yes, but you trouble yourself without hope. I am lost, of what use can I be to you?

Rencelaw. Perhaps I can be of use to you. Are you indeed a fallen man? (Edward looks at him, sighs and hangs his head) Then you have the greatest claim upon my compassion, my attention, my utmost endeavors to raise you once more, to the station in society from which you have fallen, 'for he that lifts a fallen fellow creature from the dust, is greater than the hero who conquers a world.'

Ed. (starts) Merciful heaven! My mother's dying words! Who and what are you?

Rencelaw. I am one of those whose life and labors are passed in rescuing their fellow-men from the abyss into which you have fallen. I administer the pledge of sobriety to those who would once more become an ornament to society and a blessing to themselves and to those around them.

Ed. That picture is too bright, it cannot be.

Rencelaw. You see before you one who for twenty years was a prey to this dreadful folly.

Ed. Indeed! no, no; it is too late.

Rencelaw. You mistake; it is not too late. Come with me, we will restore you to society. Reject not my prayers; strength will be given you, the Father of purity smiles upon honest endeavors.
Come, my brother, enroll your name among the free, the disen-thralled, and be a man again.

Ed. Merciful heaven! grant the prayer of a poor wretch be heard!

SCENE II.—Union Square—Lights up—Citizens passing during the scene—Children playing ball, hoop, etc.

Enter, Lawyer Cribbs, r.

Crib. Now, this is a lucky escape. It's fortunate that old Sykes, the miller, was in court, who knew me, or I might have found it difficult to get out of the infernal scrape. What a dreadful night I have passed, to be sure—what with the horrid noise of the rats that I expected every moment would commence making a breakfast of my toes, the cold, and horrible language of my miserable and black-guard companions. I might as well have passed the crawling hours in purgatory, ugh! I'm glad it's over—catch me in such company again, that's all. Now for my design on Encelaw & Co. I think there can be no detection, the signature is perfect. I'll get some well-dressed boy to deliver the check, receive the money, and I'm off to the far West or England, as soon as possible. Would I were certain of the ruin of this drunken scoundrel, and the infamy of his tiger-like wife, I should be content.

Enter, Boy, l. u. e., crosses to r.

—Where are you going so quickly, my lad?

Boy. (r.) On an errand, sir.

Enter, William Dowton, l. u. e.

Crib. Do you want to earn half a dollar?

Boy. With pleasure, sir, honestly.

Crib. Oh, of course, honestly.

Will. I doubt, that, if he rows in your boat.

Crib. I am obliged to meet a gentleman on business, precisely at this hour, by the Pearl St. House. Call at the Mechanic's Bank for me, deliver this check; the teller will give you the money, come back quickly, and I'll reward you with a silver dollar.

Boy. I'll be as quick as possible, sir, and thank you, too.

(Exit hastily, r.

Will. I knew the old skunk had money, but I was not aware that he banked in New York. Hallo! here's Miss Spindle a twigging the fashions; here'll be fun with the old rats. I told her half an hour ago, Cribbs was at a large party among the 'stocracy, last night.

Crib. (after putting up his wallet, sees Miss Spindle) Confound it! here's that foolish old maid, at such a time, too. Ah! there's no avoiding.

Enter, Miss Spindle, l.

Miss S. Good gracious! Mr. Cribbs, how do you do? I declare, a how well you do look—a little dissipation improves you.

Crib. What?

Will. (aside) She's beginning already. Hurrah! Go it, old gal!
Miss S. I swow, now, I'm right glad to see you.
Crib. You have all the pleasure to yourself.
Will. (aside) She'll find that out, bye and bye.
Miss S. Now, don't be so snappish, Lawyer Cribbs; neighbors should be neighborly, you know. Who was it that had the pleasure to introduce you?
Will. (aside) I rather guess I went that stick of candy.

(Cribbs stares at Miss Spindle)
Miss S. Now, don't look so cross about it. I think you ought to feel right slick, as I do. Now do tell what kind of music had you?
Will. (aside) Plenty o' hollaring and clubs, with considerable running accompaniment.
Miss S. Now don't look so angry and scared. Who did play the fiddle? Was it Herr Noll, Young Burke, or Ole Bull? Don't keep my curiosity on the stretch.
Crib. Beezlebub stretch your curiosity! What are you yelling about Herr Noll, Young Burke, and Ole Bull for?
Will. (aside) I calculate Captain (name of captain of watch) played first fiddle to the overture of "Lock and Key."
Miss S. Well, I swow, I never seen such ill-temper. Why I know New York tip-tops always have somebody first chop among the fiddlers; for cousin Jemima told me when she was at the Tabernacle, her very hair stood on end when Herwig led the musicians with Heat-oven's sympathy.
Crib. (aside) The old fool's perfectly crazy!
Will. (aside) Well, if the old chap hadn't any music, it wasn't for want of bars and staves. I reckon he got out his notes when they let him off.
Miss S. Now, don't be angry, Lawyer Cribbs; you know I only ask for information. Do the stocracy go the hull temperance principle, and give their visitors nothing but ice water?
Will. (aside) I calculate Captain, will you only hear me?
Miss S. Well, ain't I listening all the time, and you won't tell me nothin'. Were there any real live lions there? Did Col. Johnson scalp a live Indian, to amuse the ladies? Did Dr. Dodds put everybody into a phosphoric state, when they were all dancing, and the lights went out? Did Senator D—dance a hornpipe to please the children, and make a bowl of punch at twelve o'clock? Did—(out of breath)
Will. (aside) She'll ask him directly if the elephants played at billiards.
Crib. Madam! madam! will you listen? (shouts out) In the name of confusion, what are you talking about?
Miss S. Why, of the grand sorrie—the party, to be sure.
Crib. I know nothing of any party; you're insane.
Miss S. Oh, no, I ain't neither. I was told of it by one——
Crib. Told by one? who?
Will. (coming forward, c.) Me, I calculate. I watched you, I guess.
Crib. Watched!
Will. Guess I did—so shut up!
Crib. Confusion!
Will. I say, Squire, where did you buy your new coat?
Crib. Go to the devil, both of you!
THE DRUNKARD.

Will. Where's the tail of your old one? Ha! ha!

Miss S. Well, I swow, this is like one of Jeddie's addle eggs. I can neither make clucks nor chickens on 'em. Well, I've got a good budget of news and scandal anyhow. So I'll be off back to the village, this very day; this vile city is no place for romantic sensibilities and virgin purity.

(exit, L.)

SCENE III.—Broadway, with a view of Barnum's Museum.

Enter, Arden Rencelaw, L.; crosses to R.—Bank messenger enters after him, L.

Mess. Mr. Rencelaw! Mr. Rencelaw! I beg pardon for hurriedly addressing you, but our cashier desires to know if this is your signature. (produces check)

Ren. My signature—good heavens, no!—five thousand dollars. Is it cashed?

Mess. Not half an hour. The teller cashed it instantly.

Ren. Who presented the check?

Mess. A young boy, sir, whom I saw just now, recogn'zed, and sent to the bank immediately; but the cashier, Mr. Armond, arriving directly afterwards, doubted it, and I was despatched to find you.

Ren. Run to the bank directly; call for a police officer as you pass. I am rather infirm, but will soon follow; do not appear hurried; our measures must be prompt and I fear not for the result. (exit MESSENGER, L.)

Enter, William Dowton, R.

—Ah, honest William; I have been searching for you; Edward desired to see you.

Will. Thank and bless you, sir. How is he?—where?

Ren. Comparatively well and happy, at my house. His wife and child will be here immediately; I have sent a carriage for them. Their home—their happy home—is prepared for them in the village, and I have obtained almost certain information of his grandfather's will.

Will. Thank heaven! But, sir, you appear alarmed, excited.

Ren. A forgery has been committed, in the name of our firm, upon the Mechanic's Bank.

Will. Bless me! the Mechanic's Bank! Who gave the check, sir?

Ren. A boy, William.

Will. A boy? how long ago?

Ren. Not half an hour! Why this eagerness?

Will. I—I'll tell you, sir. Mr. Middleton told me that Lawyer Cribs, when the poor fellow was in poverty and drunkenness, urged him to commit a forgery. Not half an hour since, I saw Cribs give a boy a check, and tell him to take it to the Mechanics' Bank, receive some money, and bring it to him somewhere near the Pearl Street House, where he would find him with a gentleman.

Ren. So, so! I see it all. Come with me to the Tombs, and secure an officer. If you should meet Middleton, do not at present mention this—come. (exit, R.)

Will. I'll follow you, sir, heart and hand. If I once get my grip on the old fox, he won't get easily loose, I guess. (exit hastily, R.)
THE DRUNKARD.

SCENE IV.—Room in Rencelew's house—very handsome table, chairs, handsome books, etc.

EDWARD MIDDLETON, C., discovered reading—dressed, and looking well, etc.

Ed. (side of table) What gratitude do I not owe this generous, noble-hearted man, who, from the depths of wretchedness and horror, has restored me to the world, to myself, and to religion. Oh! what joy can equal the bright sensations of a thinking being, when redeemed from that degrading vice; his imprisoned heart beats with rapture; his swelling veins bound with vigor; and with tremulous gratitude, he calls on the Supreme Being for blessings on his benefactor.

Mary. (outside, r.) Where is my dear—my beloved, redeemed one?

MARY enters, with JULIA, R.

—Edward! my dear, dear husband! (they embrace

Ed. Mary, my blessed one! My child, my darling. Bounteous heaven! accept my thanks!

Jul. Father, dear father—you look as you did the bright sunny morning I first went to school. Your voice sounds as it used when I sang the evening hymn and you kissed and blessed me. You cry, father. Do not cry; but your tears are not such tears as mother shed, when she had no bread to give me.

Ed. (kissing her) No, my blessed child, they are not; they are tears of repentance, Julia, but of joy.

Mary. Oh! my beloved, my redeemed one, all my poor sufferings are as nothing, weighed in a balance with my present joy.

Enter, RENCELAW, R.

—Respected sir, what words can express our gratification?

Rencelew. Pay it where 'tis justly due, to heaven! I am but the humble instrument, and in your sweet content, I am rewarded.

Jul. (going to RENCELAW, R.) I shall not forget what mother last night taught me.

Rencelew. What was that, sweet girl?

Jul. In my prayers, when I have asked a blessing for my father and my mother, I pray to Him to bless Arden Rencelew, too.

Rencelew. Dear child.

Ed. I will not wrong your generous nature, by fulsome outward gratitude, for your most noble conduct, but humbly hope, that He will give strength to continue in the glorious path, adorned by your bright example. In the words of New England's favored poet:

"There came a change, the cloud rolled off,
A light fell on my brain,
And like the passing of a dream,
That cometh not again.
The darkness of my spirit fled,
I saw the gulf before;
And shuddered at the waste behind,
And am a man once more."
ACT V.

SCENE I.—Village landscape, as in Act I.—Side cottage, L. U. E.

Enter, Farmer Stevens, R., and Farmer Gates, L., meeting.

Stev. Good afternoon, Mr. Gates. You’ve returned from Boston earlier than common to-day. Any news? anything strange, eh?

Gates. Why, ye-es, I guess there is. Just by the Post Office I met William Dowton; how are you, says I, and was driving slowly along, when he hailed me to stop, and—but I forgot to ask you, has Squire Cribbs been here to-day?

Stev. I have not seen the old knave—why do you ask so particular?

Gates. Well, William, you know, is as honest as the sun, and he told me there were dreadful suspicions that Cribbs had committed a heavy forgery on the firm of Rencelaw & Co., and as I was already in my wagon, and had a good horse, he wished I would drive out pretty quick, and if old Cribbs were here, manage to detain him till Mr. Rencelaw and William arrived with the police officers—that if the sly old fox were guilty he might be caught before he absquatulated.

Stev. Well, I hope for the credit of the village, he is not guilty of this bad action, though I have long known his heart was blacker than his coat. Witness his conduct to the sweetheart of Will’s poor sister, Agnes. Did you tell him the glad news that her senses were restored?

Gates. No, our hurry was so great; but his mind will be prepared for it, for good Dr. Woodworth always told him her malady was but temporary.

Stev. Well, the poor girl has got some secret, I’m sure, and she’ll not tell it any one but William. (exit, R.)

Gates. Hark! that’s his voice; yes, here’s William, sure enough.

Enter, William, L.

—Well, William, everything is just as you directed, but no signs of the old one yet.

Will. The rascal’s on his way to be sure. Bill Parkins told me he saw him passing through Kings bridge half an hour before we came through there. I guess he’s taken the upper read, to lead all pursuit out of the track. Mr. Rencelaw and the police are at the cross-roads, and I rather guess we can take charge of the lower part of the village; so there’s no fear of our missing him; mind, you’re not to say anything to Edward Middleton. Mr. Rencelaw would not have him disturbed till all is secure.

Gates. Oh, I understand. How the whole village rejoiced when they saw him and his sweet wife return in peace and joy to the happy dwelling of their parents. Have you seen your sister, William?

Will. No, farmer, I haven’t seen the poor girl yet. Nor do I wish it, till this business is all fixed.

Gates. Ay, but she wants to see you; she has got to tell you some secret.

Will. A secret! some of her wild fancies, I reckon, poor girl.

Gates. William, you are mistaken; your dear sister’s mind is quite restored.
Will. What! how? Don’t trifle with me, farmer, I could not stand it.

Gates. I tell you, William, she is sane, quite well, as Dr. Woodward said she would be.

Will. What! will she know and call me by my name again? Shall I hear her sweet voice carolling to the sun at early morning—shall she take her place among the singers at the old meeting-house again? Shall I once more at evening hear her murmur the prayers our poor old mother taught her? Thank heaven! thank heaven!

Gates. Come, William, come, rouse you, she’s coming.

Agnes. (without, R.)

“They called her blue-eyed Mary,
When friends and fortune smiled.”

Will. Farmer, just stand back for a moment or two; all will be right in a few minutes. (exit Farmer, R.

Enter, Agnes, plainly but neatly dressed, R.—Sees her brother.

Agnes. William! brother!

Will. My darling sister!

Agnes. I know you, William; I can speak to you, and hear you, dear, dear brother.

Will. May He be praised for this.

Agnes. William, I have much to tell you, and ’tis important that you should know it instantly. I know Edward Middleton is here, and it concerns him most. When I recovered my clear senses, William, when I remembered the meeting-house, and the old homestead, and the little dun cow I used to milk, and poor old Neptune, and could call them by their names——

Will. Bless you!

Agnes. Strange fancies would keep forming in my poor brain, and remembrances flit along my memory like half-forgotten dreams. But among them, clear and distinct, was that fearful day when old Cribbs would have abused me, and you, dear brother, saved me.

Will. Darn the old varmint!

Agnes. Hush, William, the memory of that precise spot would still intrude upon me, and a vague thought that when insane I had concealed myself, and seen something hidden. Searching round carefully one day, I saw a little raised artificial hillock close beneath the hedge. I went and got a hoe from Farmer William’s barn, and after digging near a foot below, I found—what think you, William?

Will. What, girl—what?

Agnes. Concealed in an old tin case, the will of Edward’s grandfather! Confirming to his dear son the full possession of all his property. The other deed under which Cribbs has acted was a forgery——

Will. Where is it now?

Agnes. In the house, safe locked up in mother’s bureau till you returned.

Enter, Rencelaw, Police Officers and Boy, hastily, L.

Rence. Friend William, Cribbs is on the upper road coming down the hill.
Enter, Farmer Gates and Farmer Stevens, r.

Will. Farmer Gates, do you meet him here; answer any questions he may ask with seeming frankness. Sister, he is after that will, even now. Mr. Rencelaw, let us retire into the house and watch the old rascal.

Gates. (alone) Well, am I to lie now, if he asks any questions? It's a new thing to me, and I'm afraed I can't do it, even in a good cause. Well, if I mustn't tell truth exactly, I must do as the papers say the members do in Congress, and dodge the present question.

Enter, Cribbs, l., hurriedly, evidently alarmed—Starts at seeing Farmer, then, familiarly.

Crib. Good day, farmer, good day; your folks all well?

Gates. All sound and hearty.

Crib. Any news, eh?

Gates. Nothing particular; corn's riz a little; sauce is lower. Potatoes hold their own, and Wilkin's cow's got a calf.

Crib. Been in New York, lately, eh?

Gates. Why, yes, I was in the city this morning.

Crib. Did you see William Dowton, there, eh?

Gates. No, not in New York. (aside) That's dodge number one.

Crib. Fine afternoon, eh?

Gates. Yes, fine day, considering.

Crib. Likely to rain, eh?

Gates. If it does we shall have a shower, I guess. (aside) Come, blackcoat didn't make much out of me this time.

Crib. He's gone! No one observes me. Now, then, for the will, and instant flight! If I take the lower road I shall escape all observation. Haste—haste! (exit into house, l. u. e.)

Enter, from house, William, Rencelaw, Agnes, Farmers, Police Officers, and Boy.

Will. There he goes by the lower road. Boy, was that the man gave you the paper.

Boy. I'm sure of it, sir.

Will. Mr. Rencelaw, you know enough, sir, from what I have said, perfectly to understand our purpose?

Renc. Perfectly, honest William.

Will. Now, Farmer Gates, he's gone round by the lower road, evidently to get clear of being seen if possible. Now, if we cut pretty quick across Farmer William's pasture we are there before him, and can keep ourselves concealed.

Will. Come along, then. Now, old Cribbs, I calculate you'll find a hornet's nest about your ears pretty almighty quick. (exit, r.)

SCENE II.—Front and Cut Wood.

Enter, William, Rencelaw, Agnes, Boy, Farmers, and Police Officers, r.
THE DRUNKARD.

Enter, CRIBBS, cautiously and fearful, L.

Will. All right; we're here first, now for ambuscade. All hide behind the trees. Hush! I hear a footstep, he's coming round the barn. Close, close. (all retire, L.)

Crib. All's safe—I'm certain no one has observed me.

Will. (aside) What would you like to bet? i

Crib. Hark! 'tis nothing. Now for the will; from this fatal evidence I shall at least be secure. (advances to the mound, R., and starts) Powers of mischief! the earth is freshly turned. (searches) The deed is gone!

Enter, AGNES hastily, and down L.—In a tone of madness.

The will is gone—the bird has flown.
The rightful heir has got his own—ha! ha!

Crib. (paralyzed and recovering) Ha! betrayed! ruined! Mad devil, you shall pay for this. (rushes toward her)

WILLIAM enters, catches his arm, and holds up the will—Police Officer, who has got to R., seizes other arm, and points pistol to his head—RENCELAW holds up forged check, and points to it—Boy, R., pointing to CRIBBS—Farmers, R. c—Picture—Pause.

Will. Trapped! All day with you, Squire.

Rence. Hush! William, do not oppress a poor down-fallen fellow creature. Most unfortunate of men, sincerely do I pity you.

Crib. (recovering—bold and obdurate) Will your pity save me from the punishment of my misdeeds? No! when compassion is required I'll beg it of the proud philanthropist, Arden Rencelaw.

Rence. Unhappy wretch! What motives could you have? This world's goods were plenty with you—what tempted you into these double deeds of guilt?

Crib. Revenge and avarice, the master-passions of my nature. With my heart's deepest, blackest feelings, I hated the father of Edward Middleton. In early life he detected me in an act of vile atrocity, that might have cost me my life. He would not betray, but pardoned, pitied, and despised me. From that hour I hated, with a feeling of intensity that has existed even beyond the grave, descending unimpaired to his noble son. By cunning means, which you would call hypocrisy, I wormed myself into the favor of the grandfather, who, in his dying hour, delivered into my hands his papers. I and an accomplice, whom I bribed, forged the false papers; the villain left the country. Fearful he should denounce me, should he return, I dared not destroy the real will; but yesterday the news reached me that he was dead. And now, one blow of evil fortune has destroyed me.

Rence. Repentance may yet avail you?

Crib. Nothing. I have lived a villain—a villain let me die. (exit, with Officers and Farmers)

Rence. William, tell Middleton I shall see him in a day or two; I must follow that poor man to New York.

Will. Oh, Mr. Rencelaw, what blessings can repay you.
Rence. The blessings of my own approving conscience. "The heart of the feeling man is like the noble tree, which, wounded itself, yet pours forth precious balm." When the just man quits this transitory world, the dark angel of death enshrouds him with heavenly joy, and bears his smiling spirit to the bright regions of eternal bliss.

Will. Well, if there's a happier man in all the world than Bill Dowton, I should like to see him. My brother Edward again a man—you, my dear sister, again restored to me—come, we'll go tell all the news; hurrah! hurrah!

(singing)

"We'll dance all night by the bright moonlight,
And go home with the girls in the morning."

LAST SCENE.—Interior of Cottage as in Act 1st, Scene 1st. Everything denoting domestic peace and tranquil happiness—The sun is setting over the hills at back of landscape—Edward discovered near music stand, R.—Julia seated on low stool on his L.—Mary sewing at handsome work table, L.—Elegant table, R. 2 E., with astral lamp not lighted—Bible and other books on it.—Two beautiful flower-stands, with roses, myrtles, etc., under window, L. and R.—Bird-cages on wings, R. and L.—Covers of tables, chairs, etc., all extremely neat, and in keeping.

Edward plays on flute symphony to "Home, Sweet Home."—Julia sings first verse—Flute solo accompaniment—The burden is then taken up by chorus of villagers behind—Orchestral accompaniments, etc.—Gradually crescendo, forte.—Villagers enters from C. gradually, grouping L. and C.—Action of recognition and good wishes, etc., while melody is progressing—The melody is repeated quicker, and all retire with exception of Edward, Mary, Julia, William and Agnes, singing, and becoming gradually diminuendo—Air repeated slowly—Julia kneels to Edward, who is at table, R., seated, in prayer.—Edward's hand on Bible, and pointing up—Mary standing, leaning upon his chair—William and Agnes, L. C.—Music till curtain falls—Picture.

THE END.
My Pard;—OR—
The Fairy of The Tunnel.

A Western Drama in 4 acts, by Len Ware, for 6 male, 5 female characters. Time of playing, 2 hours.

SYNOPSIS OF EVENTS.

ACT I.—Home of Mrs. Divine—Katie, the Irish servant girl—Lucky Bill and Katie—'Squire, and he's no gentleman”—Lawyer Smart arrives, to give Charley Divine papers and instructions, how to find the lost heiress—Unexpected arrival of Charley, half drunk—Lost $500 on the eagle—"You're a drunken fool! Charley, you will break your mother's heart"—"I'll reform"—"Here are the papers, now you must go"—Lucky Bill a scoundrel—Charley places papers on table and greets his mother—Lucky Bill changes papers and pockets those belonging to Charley—"If you have any trouble, Katie will come and identify the lost heiress"—The farewell—"Mother, I'll find my father, or his grave"—Lucky Bill triumphant.

ACT II.—A mining town in the Sierras—Santa-Anna's saloon—Lucky Bill and others at table—Carrots and the squirrel—Santa Anna and Carrots—"Don't kill the girl"—Col Billy interferes—"Total wreck! total wreck!"—My Pard and Col Billy—Pard's story of the blue eyed baby—Charley arrives, surprising Lucky Bill—A game of bluff—Bill shows his hand and tells Charley that Belle is the heiress, and she is to be his wife—Col Billy warns Belle, and makes an enemy of Bill, but gains the friendship of Carrots and My Pard—Pard and Charley become partners in the tunnel—"We'll strike it rich some day, there's gold there, I've been here since '49, and orter know"—The stolen papers—"Lucky Bill, you are not only a gambler, but a thief! you have stolen my papers"—"Have a care tenderfoot, nothing would suit me better, than to draw this knife across your throat"—Carrots and My Pard interfere—"Drop'er stranger, drop'er.

ACT III.—Lucky Bill communes with himself—Carrots and Lucky Bill—"What are you doing in My Pard's door-yard?"—Col Billy on the scene—Banished by the vigilants, total wreck! total wreck!—Carrot's song—Charley gives Carrots paper to keep—"Keep the secret, I love you Carrots"—Pard's story of the blue eyed baby in the cradle and the wife that is waiting for him—A sad, sad story—The Christmas dinner—"Nothing but coon, coon straight, once a year you require coon; I've been here since '49, I orter know"—"Of course he orter know, he's always right, I know what coon is—why—well coon is coon"—Pard's poverty, no credit—Carrot steals bread of Santa Anna—Charley tells My Pard how he fought Lucky Bill in the tunnel and got the paper back—"O! Charley, the vigilants, give me the paper, they won't hurt an old man like me"—Charley's Christmas song—Pard discovers in Charley his blue-eyed baby, before he can tell him, the vigilants are upon them—Arrest of Charley—Pard tells them that Charley is innocent, that it was himself that stole the paper—Arrest of My Pard.

ACT IV.—The trial of My Pard—Charley's errand to the tunnel—Arrival of Lawyer Smart—Col Billy's oath—That yaller dog—The penalty is death—Carrots pleads for My Pard—Lawyer as a witness—"Never lost a case or made a mistake in my life"—Katie swears he is no lawyer—Smart regains, the stolen papers—Lucky Bill accused—"Save me from the vigilants"—Charley finds a father and a sweetheart—Katie's song—Surprise of Carrots, who joins in the chorus—"Carrots, the lost heiress is found"—Gold in the tunnel—"Struck it rich at last, I knew we would, been here since '49, I orter know"—"Carrots, I hope you will always keep a place in your heart for 'My Pard'"—Price 25c.
500,000 PLAYS WANTED.

Do not retain your copies of Plays you do not desire to use, but take advantage of the EXTRAORDINARY OFFER!

Made only by Ames' Publishing House!

PLAYS EXCHANGED

We will exchange Plays as follows: For every copy sent us published by Baker, Roorbach, Denison, and of French's Standard Dramas, we will send one from Our Own List, which is headed: "Ames' Series"

We will not exchange for Lacy's, Dick's, Cumberland Edition; or, Plays in Our List.

The books sent us must be clean and whole.
Prepay your postage or express charges.
Do not ask us if we will exchange any other way—it will be time wasted.

Address,

AMES' PUB'G. CO.,
Lock Box 152. CLYDE, OHIO.

Always remember that we fill orders for any Play published, no matter whether you see it on any of the catalogues we send out or not.

Don't fail to put your address on wrapper. In your order state titles of books and number of plays sent in for exchange. If these requests are not complied with no notice will be given your order.
HAUNTED BY A SHADOW;
-or,-
Hunted :: Down.

A Drama in 4 Acts for 8 male and 2 female characters, by Geo. B. Chase. Costumes modern, characters excellent; and amateurs can easily produce it.

SYNOPSIS.

ACT I. Scene 1st—Home of Judge Dean—Mrs. Warren meets her son, Will Warren, (alias Frank Hayes) whom she has not seen for years—Nora and her boy lover—Interview between Ralph Monksly and Frank—A plan to get rid of Mrs. Warren—The "shadow"—Nora and Frank—The "ghost." Caesar Orangeblossom—Lost papers—Felix Bolton, the detective, on the trail. Scene 2nd—Caesar visits the office of Ralph Monksly—The drugged wine—"Caught in his own trap"—The quarrel—Dr. Radcliff—The bargain closed.

ACT II. Scene 1st—Judge Dean and the detective Bolton—Frank's villainy exposed to the Judge. Scene 2nd—The lunatic asylum—An answer to the advertisement—"H-a-n-k F-i-n-n—Hank Finn—Hank and the dog—Mrs. Warren, an inmate of the asylum—The brutal doctor—Rescue of Mrs. Warren by Hank.

ACT III. Scene 1st—The proposal—Judge Dean's request of Nora—Nora refuses Frank—His anger and threat—Legal papers—An English fortune—Mrs. Warren's decision—Abduction of Nora—The detective to the rescue. Scene 2nd—Nora in the asylum—Escape of Nora—Death of Dr. Radcliff—Papers found.

ACT IV. Scene 1st—Barney O'Toole in possession—He discovers a plan of robbery—The detective as a Dutch peddler—Frank and Ralph recognize him, capture and confine him in trunk—Barney releases him—The robbery—Death of Ralph—"I have kept my oath!"—Scene 2nd—Frank's villainy exposed—Barney, the rightful heir and son—Shadowed—The criminals to justice—Happy ending.

Two Aunt Emilys; or, Quits.

A Farce in 1 Act, by Martie E. Tibbets, for 8 female characters. This is an excellent little farce, consisting of light comedy, easy acting, racy dialogue and a good moral.

SYNOPSIS.

Quarrel between Dinah and Biddy. Aunt Emily, whose money the girls are trying to get. Mrs. Morton and the telegram. Dismay of Helen and Grace. Dinah lays down the law. Onions and cayenne pepper. Arrival of Belle Morton and her teacher, who is the rich Aunt Emily. Belle's joke on Aunt Emily. The long unheard of sister found. Belle's joke on the girls discovered. The poor Aunt Emily secures a home. Belle gets even and calls it "Quits."
Hearts of Gold.

A drama in 4 acts by John Rupert Farrell, for 9 male and 3 female characters. Costumes English. Time of playing 1 hour and 45 minutes.

SYNOPSIS OF AVENTE.

ACT I.—Jessie and Polly—Glorious news—Lieutenant Wumppyutut, Polly's lover—Charles Aigsburth and Jessie—A promise not given—Arrival of Jessie's brother—Helene, the gypsy girl, now Miss Ponsifrail, the actress—A surprise—Helene and Jessie—Charles and Helene, old friends—"I am no longer the ignorant gypsy girl, you shall not cast me off like a broken plaything"—Zeno, the gypsy—The secret—Polly and Jack—The disowned son—The will—"It is a forgery"—A baffled villain—Jack and Jessie—A broken promise—Vows renewed—Charles rejected and defeated.

ACT II.—Lieutenant Wumppyutut takes a nap—The cuckoo—Polly discovered—The violin lesson—Jack discloses the secret in Helene Ponsifrail's life to the Captain—Charles and Helene—"There is nothing left but revenge"—A wicked compact—"I will play my part as the gypsy girl"—Zeno—"Charles, you and I are brothers"—"You are Jack Aigsburth's adopted brother"—The marriage interrupted by the gypsy girl—"I am that man's wife"—"It is a lie, comrades, I am no coward."

ACT III.—Return of the Regiment—Charles now Jessie's accepted lover—Helene discovers Charles's perfidy—Captain tells Jessie that Jack saved his life on the battlefield—Jack's ring—Lieutenant Wumppyutut as a gypsy, tells Polly's fortune—Helene informs Jessie that Jack is true to her, that she was the gypsy girl, but not Jack's wife—Charles denounces Helene and attempts her murder—"My God, I have killed her"—The escape.

ACT IV.—Polly gives Lieutenant Wumppyutut a present—The violin lesson No. 2—Captain and Jack—"We found Helene insensible, she has now recovered, but she can never be anything to you"—Lieutenant Wumppyutut playing the violin for a wife—Jack and Helene—"I forgive you"—Charles and Jack—"Repentance comes too late"—Attempts to murder Jack—Helene appears—Zeno—Charles and Helene depart to commence a new life—The farewell.

Price 15 cts.

A Slight Mistake. A comedy in 1 act, for 5 female characters. One interior scene. Costumes modern and old fashioned. Time of performance 40 minutes. Very good for a school exhibition. Miss Penelope Perfect, the leading part is an uproariously amusing comedy character.

A Victim of Woman's Rights. A monologue by Nellie M. Locke. Mrs. Peck, who is a woman suffragist, leaves her home and baby in care of her husband, while she attends conventions, clubs, etc. His experience with the baby and tending to the household duties prove almost too much for his temper. Order a copy and read his experience. "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander" in this case.
JUST OUT—A New Temperance Play!

DOT; the Miner's Daughter,

-or-

One Glass of Wine.

IN FOUR ACTS.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

DAVID MASON...........................................A farmer.
HERBERT MASON.......................................David's son—just from college.
ROYAL MEADOWS.......................................Foster-son of Mrs. Clifton.
ARTHUR FLOYD.........................................A villain.
GEORGE CLIFTON......................................A returned Californian.
PARSON SWIFT........................................An astonished clergyman.
BILL TORRY...........................................A boatman—Floyd's confederate.
BREWSTER...............................................Police officer.
EBONY....................................................A colored individual.
MRS. MASON...........................................David's wife—a good adviser.
DOLORES ................................................The miner's daughter.
MRS. CLIFTON .........................................George Clifton's deserted wife.
WINNIFRED CLIFTON................................Mrs. Clifton's daughter.
HAPZIBAH...............................................A lady of color.

Carnival of Days.

A NEW AND ORIGINAL SERIES OF TABLEAUX.

It is especially designed for Amateur Companies, as it requires only a platform, no scenery being necessary for its production. Mirth and Sadness are well combined. Costumes Modern.

Time one hour. The following are the days represented.

Price 15 Cents—Order a Copy.

CHARACTERS.

READER.
NEW YEAR.............................................Chorus of girls in white.
WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY..........................George Washington.
VALENTINE'S DAY...................................Maiden and lover.
ST. PATRICK'S DAY.................................Chorus of boys.
WASHING DAY..........................................Girls at tubs.
HOUSE-CLEANING DAY.............................Man and woman.
APRIL FOOL'S DAY..................................Old maid, and little boy.
ASH WEDNESDAY.....................................Monk.
GOOD FRIDAY.........................................Women at cross.
EASTER................................................Chorus of girls in white.
MAY DAY..............................................May queen, chorus of children.
MEMORIAL DAY.....................................Two soldiers.
JULY FOURTH........................................Uncle Sam, boys.
EMANCIPATION DAY................................Darkey.
HALLOWE'EN..........................................Group of girls.
THANKSGIVING DAY...............................Man, little girl.
CHRISTMAS..........................................Group of children.
THE NEW YORK BOOK AG'T;
—OR,—
THE MISER'S GOLD.

A Drama in Four Acts by D. II. Moore, Jr.  Time 1 hour—7 male, 3 female characters. Costumes modern. Scenery simple.

A good villain, two old men, country boy, Dan, the half-wit, two fine Irish parts for Biddy and Pat, leading lady and old woman, detective in search of a criminal, who at last is captured after robbing and killing the Miser, who is his own father. Price 15 Cents.

LOCKED

IN A DRESS-MAKER'S ROOM;
—OR,—

MR. BOB HOLIDAY'S FLIRTATION.

A Farce in One Act, by Willard Guepner. 3 male, 2 female characters. Time 20 minutes.

Very good afterpiece in which the characters are all good. Mr. Holiday, a banker, is in love with Mrs. Stone; Miss Prim, the dress-maker, in whose rooms the flirtation is carried on; Mr. Stone becomes jealous and goes in search of his wife; Mr. Holiday cannot escape and is transformed into an ancient maiden—Tableau. Price 15 Cents.
Amos' Plays—Continued.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>NO.</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>M. P.</th>
<th>F. P.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>146</td>
<td>Our Awful Aunt</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>58</td>
<td>Out in the Streets</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>51</td>
<td>Rescued</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>39</td>
<td>Saved</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>102</td>
<td>Turn of the Tide</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>63</td>
<td>Three Glasses a Day</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>62</td>
<td>Ten Nights in a Bar-Room</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>58</td>
<td>Wrecked</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

COMEDIES.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>NO.</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>M. P.</th>
<th>F. P.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>324</td>
<td>A Day In A Doctor's Office</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>136</td>
<td>A Legal Holiday</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>168</td>
<td>A Pleasure Trip</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>124</td>
<td>An Afflicted Family</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>295</td>
<td>Captured</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>178</td>
<td>Caste</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>176</td>
<td>Factory Girl</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>207</td>
<td>Heroic Dutchman of '76</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>194</td>
<td>Love</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>174</td>
<td>Love's Labor Lost</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>158</td>
<td>Mr. Hudson's Tiger Hunt</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>149</td>
<td>New Years in N. Y.</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>37</td>
<td>Not So Bad After All</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>237</td>
<td>Not Such a Fool as He Looks</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>126</td>
<td>Our Daughters</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>265</td>
<td>Pug and the Baby</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>114</td>
<td>Passions</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>264</td>
<td>Prof. James Experience</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>219</td>
<td>Rags and Bottles</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>239</td>
<td>Scale with Sharps and Flats</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>221</td>
<td>Solon Shingle</td>
<td>12</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>262</td>
<td>Two Bad Boys</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>87</td>
<td>The Biter Bit</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>13</td>
<td>The Cigarette</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>240</td>
<td>$2,000 Reward</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

TRAGEDIES.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>NO.</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>M. P.</th>
<th>F. P.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>16</td>
<td>The Serf</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

FARCES & COMEDIETTAS.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>NO.</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>M. P.</th>
<th>F. P.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>129</td>
<td>Aar-u-ag-oos</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>426</td>
<td>Aunt Charlotte's Maid</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>294</td>
<td>A Colonel's Mishap</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12</td>
<td>A Capital Match</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>307</td>
<td>A Kiss in the Dark</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>158</td>
<td>A Texan Mother-in-Law</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>30</td>
<td>A Day Well Spent</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>169</td>
<td>A Regular Fix</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>226</td>
<td>A Professional Gardener</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>30</td>
<td>Alarmingly Suspicious</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>35</td>
<td>All In A Meddle</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28</td>
<td>An Awful Criminals</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>318</td>
<td>A Matchmaking Father</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>31</td>
<td>A Pet of the Public</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>31</td>
<td>A Romantic Attachment</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>333</td>
<td>A Thrilling Item</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>323</td>
<td>A Ticket of Leave</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>329</td>
<td>A Valentine</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>324</td>
<td>A Day in a Doctors Office</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>175</td>
<td>Betsy Baker</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>Better Half</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>86</td>
<td>Black vs. White</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>22</td>
<td>Captain Smith</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>284</td>
<td>Cheek Will Win</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>287</td>
<td>Constan Josiah</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>225</td>
<td>Cupids Carers</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>317</td>
<td>Cleveland's Reception Party</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>249</td>
<td>Double Election</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>49</td>
<td>Der Two Surprises</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>72</td>
<td>Deuce is in Him</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19</td>
<td>Did I Dream it</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>220</td>
<td>Dutechy vs. Nigger</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>158</td>
<td>Dutch Prize Fighter</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>242</td>
<td>Domestic Felicity</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>149</td>
<td>Eat? What Did You Say</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>218</td>
<td>Everybody Astonished</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>224</td>
<td>Fooling with the Wrong Man</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>233</td>
<td>Freezing a Mother-In-Law</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>154</td>
<td>Fun in a Post Office</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>154</td>
<td>Family Discipline</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>274</td>
<td>Family Jars</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>209</td>
<td>Goose with the Golden Eggs</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>13</td>
<td>Give Me My Wife</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>307</td>
<td>Haliabahocla, the Medicine Man.</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>66</td>
<td>Hans, the Dutch J. P.</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>271</td>
<td>Hans Brummel's Cafe</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>116</td>
<td>Hash</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>120</td>
<td>H. M. S. Plum</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>50</td>
<td>How She has Own Way</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>140</td>
<td>How He Popped the Quest'n.</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>59</td>
<td>Incompatibility of Temper</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>329</td>
<td>Jacob Shlaff's Mistake</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>399</td>
<td>Jimmie Jones</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11</td>
<td>John Smith</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>323</td>
<td>Johannes Biate's Mistake</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>99</td>
<td>Jumbo Jam</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>182</td>
<td>Kittie's Wedding Cake</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>127</td>
<td>Lick Skillet Wedding</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>228</td>
<td>Launderbach's Little Surprise</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>302</td>
<td>Locked in a Dress-maker's Room</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>106</td>
<td>Lodginga for Two</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>288</td>
<td>Love in all Corners</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>139</td>
<td>Matrimonial Bliss</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>251</td>
<td>Match for a other-Min-Law</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>186</td>
<td>More Blunders than one</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>69</td>
<td>Mother's Fool</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>23</td>
<td>My Heart's in Highlands</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>208</td>
<td>My Precious Betsy</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>212</td>
<td>My Turn Next</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>32</td>
<td>My Wife's Relations</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>186</td>
<td>My Wife andOwn-Days</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>273</td>
<td>My Neighbor's Wife</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>296</td>
<td>Nana's Leap Year Venture</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>259</td>
<td>Nobody's Moke</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>340</td>
<td>Our Hotel</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>354</td>
<td>Oyster</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>44</td>
<td>Obedience</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>33</td>
<td>On the Sly</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Ames' Plays—Continued

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>NO.</th>
<th>Plaatice</th>
<th>M.</th>
<th>P.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>57</td>
<td>Paddy Miles' Boy</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>217</td>
<td>Patent Washing Machine</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>165</td>
<td>Persevered Dutchman</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>195</td>
<td>Poor Pilcody</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>159</td>
<td>Quiet Family</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>171</td>
<td>Rough Diamond</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>180</td>
<td>Ripples</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>267</td>
<td>Room 44</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>309</td>
<td>Santa Claus' Daughter</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>48</td>
<td>Schnaps</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>138</td>
<td>Sewing Circle of Period</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>115</td>
<td>S. H. A. M. Pinafore</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>155</td>
<td>Somebody's Nobody</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>327</td>
<td>Strictly Temperance</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>232</td>
<td>Stage Struck Yankee</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>241</td>
<td>Struck by Lightning</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>370</td>
<td>Slick and Skinner</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>326</td>
<td>Too Many Cousins</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>339</td>
<td>Two Gentlemen in a Fix</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>137</td>
<td>Taking the Census</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>328</td>
<td>The Landlord's Revenge</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>292</td>
<td>That Awful Carpet Bag</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>315</td>
<td>That Rascal Pat</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>317</td>
<td>That Mysterious B'dle</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>38</td>
<td>The Bewitched Closet</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>101</td>
<td>The Coming Man</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>167</td>
<td>Turn Him Out</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>291</td>
<td>The Actor's Scheme</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>308</td>
<td>The Irish Squire of Squash Ridge</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>285</td>
<td>The Mashers Mashed</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>68</td>
<td>The Sham Professor</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>295</td>
<td>The Spellin' Skewl</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>54</td>
<td>The Two T. J's</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>42</td>
<td>Thirty-three Next Birthday</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>292</td>
<td>Tim Flannigan</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>142</td>
<td>Tit for Tat</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>272</td>
<td>The Matchmaker and His Duties</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>263</td>
<td>Trials of a Country Editor</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>The Wonderful Telephone</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>281</td>
<td>Two Aunt Emlys</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>312</td>
<td>Uncle Ethan</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>269</td>
<td>Uniform Justice</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>170</td>
<td>U. S. Mail</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>213</td>
<td>Vermont Wool Dealer</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>332</td>
<td>Which is Which</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>151</td>
<td>Wanted a Husband</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>56</td>
<td>Wearing Under Difficulties</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>70</td>
<td>Which will he Marry</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>135</td>
<td>Widower's Trials</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>147</td>
<td>Waking Him Up</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>155</td>
<td>Why They Joined the Reform Club</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>111</td>
<td>Yankee Doodlist</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>167</td>
<td>Yankee Paddler</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

GUIDE BOOKS.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>NO.</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>M.</th>
<th>P.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>17</td>
<td>Hints on Elocution</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>130</td>
<td>Hints to Amateurs</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>215</td>
<td>On to Victory</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

CANTATA.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>NO.</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>M.</th>
<th>P.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>240</td>
<td>A Skilful Walker</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>241</td>
<td>Step to Health</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>242</td>
<td>That Awful Boy</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>243</td>
<td>Ticket Taker</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>244</td>
<td>Two's Dodging</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>197</td>
<td>Tricks</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>198</td>
<td>Uncle Jeff</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>216</td>
<td>Vice Vera</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>206</td>
<td>Villikens and Dinah</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>210</td>
<td>Virginia Mummy</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>203</td>
<td>Who Stole the Chickens</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>205</td>
<td>William Tell</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>156</td>
<td>Wig-Maker and His Servants</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

---

Ethiopian Farces.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>NO.</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>M.</th>
<th>P.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>24</td>
<td>Academy of Stars</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>33</td>
<td>A Coincidence</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>63</td>
<td>An Unwelcome Return</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15</td>
<td>An Unhappy Pair</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>172</td>
<td>Black Shoemaker</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>98</td>
<td>Black Statue</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>27</td>
<td>The Coming Man</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>103</td>
<td>How Sister Pacey got her Child Baptized</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>24</td>
<td>Handy Andy</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>236</td>
<td>Hap-Hap-Dra-Dra-The</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>319</td>
<td>In For It</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>47</td>
<td>In the Wrong Box</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>77</td>
<td>Joe's Vis t</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>88</td>
<td>Mischievous Nigger</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>128</td>
<td>Musical Darkey</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>61</td>
<td>Not as Deaf as He Seems</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>244</td>
<td>Old Clothes</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>234</td>
<td>Old Dad's Cabin</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>150</td>
<td>Old Paddy</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>246</td>
<td>Othello</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>109</td>
<td>Other People's Children</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>297</td>
<td>Pomp Green's Snakes</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>236</td>
<td>Pomp's Pranks</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>147</td>
<td>Rooms to Let</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>107</td>
<td>School</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>133</td>
<td>Seeing Boating</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>179</td>
<td>Shay's Parlor</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>94</td>
<td>16,000 Years Ago</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>243</td>
<td>Sports on a Lark</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>25</td>
<td>Sport with a Sportsman</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>242</td>
<td>Stage Struck Darkey</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>238</td>
<td>Strawberry Shortcake</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10</td>
<td>Stocks Up, Stocks Down</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>64</td>
<td>That Boy Sam</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>233</td>
<td>The Best Cure</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>292</td>
<td>The Intelligence Office</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>122</td>
<td>The Select School</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>118</td>
<td>The Popcorn Man</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>178</td>
<td>The Studio</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>197</td>
<td>Tricks</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>198</td>
<td>Uncle Jeff</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>216</td>
<td>Vice Vera</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>206</td>
<td>Villikens and Dinah</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>210</td>
<td>Virginia Mummy</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>203</td>
<td>Who Stole the Chickens</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>205</td>
<td>William Tell</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>156</td>
<td>Wig-Maker and His Servants</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

---

The Little Gem Make-Up Box. Price 50 Cents.

---

Hints on Elocution

Hints to Amateurs

CANTATA.

On to Victory

A Skilful Walker, Farce.

Step to Health.

That Awful Boy.

Ticket Taker.

Two's Dodging.

Tricks.

The Coming Man.

How Sister Pacey got her Child Baptized.

Handy Andy.

Hap-Hap-Dra-Dra-The.

In For It.

In the Wrong Box.

Joe's Visit.

Mischievous Nigger.

Musical Darkey.

Not as Deaf as He Seems.

Old Clothes.

Old Dad's Cabin.

Old Paddy.

Othello.

Other People's Children.

Pomp Green's Snakes.

Pomp's Pranks.

Rooms to Let.

School.

Seeing Boating.

Shay's Parlor.

16,000 Years Ago.

Sports on a Lark.

Sport with a Sportsman.

Stage Struck Darkey.

Strawberry Shortcake.

Stocks Up, Stocks Down.

That Boy Sam.

The Best Cure.

The Intelligence Office.

The Select School.

The Popcorn Man.

The Studio.

Tricks.

The Little Gem Make-Up Box. Price 50 Cents.